Greenspan Admits 'Flaw' in Policy

UNDER SCRUTINY: Former Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan arrives on Capitol Hill Thursday to testify before the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee. Facing criticism over the current economic crisis, Greenspan denied blame for the meltdown, but conceded a "flaw" in his economic thinking. ❖ 'State of shock': Greenspan proposes tougher sanctions | Page 3

Doctors: Placebos Common

Study: Half of U.S. doctors prescribe fake treatments

LONDON | About half of American doctors in a new survey say they regularly give patients placebo treatments — usually drugs or vitamins that won't really help their condition.

And many of these doctors are not honest with their patients about what they are doing, the survey found. That contradicts advice from the American Medical Association, which recommends doctors use treatments with the full knowledge of their patients.

"It's a disturbing finding," said Franklin G. Miller, director of the research ethics program at the U.S. National Institutes Health and one of the study authors.

"There is an element of deception here which is contrary to the principle of informed consent." The study was being published online in Friday's issue of BMJ, formerly the British Medical Journal.

Scientists have long known of the "placebo effect," in which patients given a fake or ineffective treatment often improve anyway, simply because they expected to get better. "Doctors may be under a lot of pressure to help their patients, but this is not an acceptable shortcut," said Irving Kirsch, a professor of psychology at the University of Hull in Britain who has studied the use of placebos. DIRTY, TASTY MONEY

National Treasure 3: Mice

A bunch of mice turned out to be no match for the U.S. Mint. A southeast Missouri man is expected to be reimbursed for about $1,000 in bills that had been munched on by rodents. He had left the $20 bills in an unzipped vinyl bag on a desk at his home, and it was misplaced during an ice storm last winter and the flooding in March. He eventually found the bag, and in August took it to First Missouri State Bank in Jackson in hopes of recovering his losses. Bank manager Michelle Johns said Wednesday that she and two staffers picked through rodent droppings and bird feathers and reassembled the bills. "With that mess, I didn't know if we could do anything with it," Johns said. (AP)

Not THAT Kind of Role Playing, Honey

A 43-year-old Japanese woman whose sudden divorce in a virtual game world made her so angry that she killed her online husband's digital persona has been arrested on suspicion of hacking, police said Thursday. The woman used his password to log onto popular interactive game "Maple Story" to carry out the virtual murder in mid-May, "I was suddenly divorced, without a word of warning. That made me so angry," she was quoted as saying. The woman had not plotted any revenge in the real world, officials said. (AP)

Greenspan Acknowledges Mistakes

Former fed chairman says economy has him in 'shocked disbelief'

WASHINGTON | Badgered by lawmakers, former Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan denied the nation's economic crisis was his fault on Thursday but conceded the meltdown had revealed a flaw in a lifetime of economic thinking and left him in a "state of shocked disbelief."

Greenspan, who stepped down in 2006, called the banking and housing chaos a "once-in-a-century credit tsunami" that led to a breakdown in how the free market system functions. And he warned that things would get worse before they get better, with rising unemployment and no stabilization in housing prices for "many months."

Greenspan's interrogation by the House Oversight Committee was a far cry from his 18½ years as Fed chairman, when he presided over the longest economic boom in the country's history and was held in respect bordering on awe by most members of Congress.

what was necessary to protect their shareholders. Greenspan called that "a flaw in the model ... that defines how the world works."

Greenspan acknowledged under questioning that he had made a "mistake" in believing that banks, operating in their own self-interest, would do

He acknowledged that he had also been wrong in rejecting fears that the five-year housing boom was turning into an unsustainable speculative bubble that could harm the economy when it burst. Greenspan maintained during that period that home prices were unlikely to post a significant decline nationally because housing was a local market.

He said the current financial crisis had "turned out to be much broader than anything that I could have imagined." (AP)

Bloomberg Is Allowed To Run for Third Term

NEW YORK | Arguing that New York needs his financial skill to guide it through the crisis on Wall Street, Mayor Michael Bloomberg persuaded City Council to amend the term-limits law Thursday so that the billionaire independent can run for re-election next year.

By a 29-22 vote, the council agreed to allow officeholders three consecutive four-year terms. Existing law limits them to two terms, and Bloomberg's second is up at the end of 2009.

The vote dramatically alters the city's political landscape. Many would-be mayoral candidates are expected to drop out of the race rather than run against a popular incumbent with unlimited cash to spend.

Bloomberg's announcement three weeks ago that he would try to rewrite the term-limits law led to a bruising debate — and a politically damaging one for the mayor, who had previously backed the term limits law.

Bloomberg was not present for Thursday's vote, but as he left City Hall shortly afterward, a group of protesters chased him to his SUV, shouting that he was a "sellout."

McCain: Obama Will 'Say Anything'

Republican sticks with 'Joe the Plumber' theme on Fla. bus tour

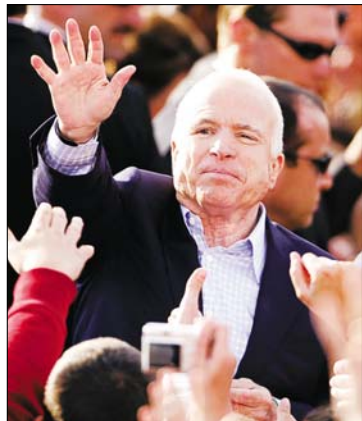

ORLANDO, FLA. | Republican John McCain, taking a cross-state bus tour aimed at keeping vote-rich Florida from swinging to the Democrats, on Thursday accused rival Barack Obama of saying "anything to get elected."

The Arizona senator said Obama had added a work requirement to his proposal to grant a 10 percent universal mortgage credit. A top Obama aide said the campaign made the change two weeks ago to avoid charges that the proposal provided "welfare" to non-working Americans.

"Thirteen days to go, and he changed his tax plan because the American people had learned the truth about it and they didn't like it," McCain told a crowd in Ormond Beach. "It's another example that he'll say anything to get elected."

An Obama spokesman accused McCain of distortion and said the Democrat's plan always included a work requirement.

The criticism of Obama came

John McCain is campaigning in Florida, which is a critical state in the election.

at the start of a bus tour targeting blue-collar Florida workers who are like the Ohio plumber, Joe Wurzelbacher, who has become the central thematic element in speeches by McCain.

"Whether it's Joe the Plumber in Ohio or Joe over here," McCain said, pointing into the crowd at All Star Building Materials in Ormond Beach, "we shouldn't be taxing our small businesses more, as Sen. Obama wants to do. We need to be helping them expand their businesses and create jobs."

IRS Has Uncashed Stimulus Checks

WASHINGTON | The IRS on Thursday announced its own little economic bailout plan, worth about $266 million, for taxpayers who didn't get their economic stimulus checks or regular income tax refunds the first time around because they couldn't be found.

The Internal Revenue Service said nearly 400,000 people have checks with their names on them waiting to be delivered as soon as they update their addresses.

The tax agency said it couldn't deliver about 279,000 rebate checks worth about $163 million coming from the economic stimulus package that Congress enacted last February. It said the U.S. Postal Service returned about 104,000 regular refund checks totaling about $103 million because of address errors. (AP)

U.S. Muslims Feel Grateful to Powell

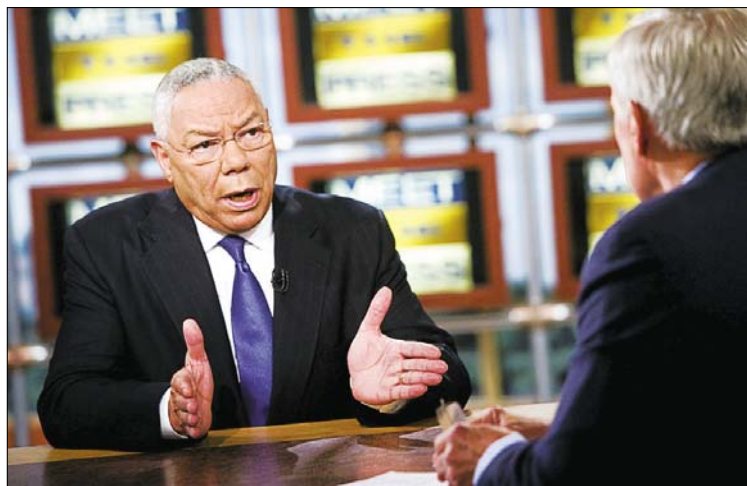

Retired general used TV interview to speak out against faith slurs

POLITICS | Lepers. Untouchables. Politically radioactive.

These are ways American Muslims describe their status in an election year when Barack Obama's opponents are spreading rumors that he is Muslim, when he is Christian, and linking him to terrorists.

So when Colin Powell, a Republican, condemned using Muslim as a smear — a tactic he said members of his own party allowed — there was an outpouring of gratitude and relief from American Muslims.

"That speech really came out of left field and really shocked us," said Wajahat Ali, 27, an attorney and nee for president. Powell noted that Republican John McCain did not spread rumors about Obama's faith, but Powell said he was "troubled" that others did.

"The correct answer is, he is not a Muslim, he's a Christian. He's always been a Christian. But the really right answer is, what if he is? Is there something wrong with being a Muslim in this country? The answer's no," Powell said.

Powell said he felt especially strongly about the rumors because of a photo he saw in The New Yorker magazine of the mother of a Muslim soldier in Arlington Cemetery embracing her son's grave, which was marked with a Muslim crescent and star. The soldier, Kareem R. Khan of New Jersey, was 20 when he was killed in Iraq.

"Muslims feel jaded by the 2008 election precisely because they see the smearing of their identity," Ali said. "Muslim or Arab is seen as a scarlet letter, political leprosy, kryptonite."

Presidential candidates "are not willing to have their photo taken, they don't meet with Muslim organizations, and they shy away from any issue that may link them to the Muslim community," said Salam al-Marayati, executive director of the Muslim Public Affairs Council.

"We're treated as untouchables in politics," al-Marayati said. RACHEL ZOLL (AP)

Iraq Blast Targets Labor Minister

Attack comes as U.S. relinquishes control of 12th Iraqi province

BAGHDAD | Iraq's labor minister escaped assassination Thursday when a suicide bomber rammed an explosives-laden SUV into his convoy, killing at least nine people in one of the safest areas of the capital.

The blast came on a day when the U.S. relinquished control of a province that includes much of the area south of Baghdad once known as the "triangle of death." Babil is the 12th of 18 Iraqi provinces to be placed under Iraqi control, paving the way for U.S. forces eventually to go home. Americans will stay in the area to help Iraqis when needed.

The bomber drove his Toyota Land Cruiser into the convoy carrying Labor and Social Affairs Minister Mahmoud Mohammed al-Radhi as it passed near Tahrir Square in the busy Bab al-Sharji market area — not far from the U.S.-protected Green Zone.

Ukraine Braces for Economic Crisis

As currency plunges, citizens rush to convert savings to U.S. dollars

KIEV, UKRAINE | Construction cranes have stopped swinging and thousands of steel workers face layoffs as Ukraine braces for a severe economic downturn.

Lacking the large foreign currency reserves of China and Russia, Ukraine is being hit harder than other former Soviet states by the global financial crisis.

"Ukraine has been exposed as the most vulnerable," said Jan Randolph, an emerging markets analyst at Global Insight.

On Thursday, the Ukrainian currency plunged against the dollar to a historic low amid a run on banks and a frantic rush to convert savings into U.S. currency. Ukraine's hryvna plummeted to 6.01 hryvna per U.S. dollar in trading at Ukraine's currency exchange.

Jittery customers lined up to buy dollars at exchange offices across the capital, some of which ran out of cash. The country was already short on foreign currency, as demand for steel, its main export commodity, plunged. The Ukrainian currency has lost over 20 percent since September.

The government spent $2.9 billion buying hryvnas to support the currency this month alone, bringing its reserves down to $34.2 billion, according to the central bank. One global rating agency after another has downgraded Ukraine's creditworthiness.

Ukraine is now pinning its hopes for economic help on a loan of up to $14 billion from the International Monetary Fund. MARIA DANILOVA AND YURAS KARMANAU (AP)

21 People Killed Across Mexico in Violent 24 Hours

CIUDAD JUAREZ, MEXICO | Four men were shot dead in front of a crowd at an amusement park, a toddler died after the car he was traveling in crashed during a gunbattle, and a businessman was killed after leading a protest against violence, officials said Thursday.

All together, 21 people died during 24 hours across Mexico, which is waging a fierce battle against drug traffickers and other criminals.

In Ciudad Juarez, across the border from El Paso, Texas, the four men were shot at the Xtreme amusement park Wednesday night, according to a spokesman for the local prosecutor's office. (AP)

Sex Ed to Spread in U.K.

Schools in England must teach all ages about reproduction

LONDON | It's a controversial idea in a land known for prudishness about sex — teaching kids as young as 5 about the birds and bees.

But with one of the highest teen pregnancy rates in Europe, the British government is bringing sex education to all schools in England — including kindergarten-aged children.

While countries like France, Holland and China already require sex education, few places demand that it be introduced at such a young age.

"It's vital that this information doesn't come from playground rumor or the mixed messages from the media about sex," Schools Minister Jim Knight said Thursday, announcing that sex ed would be added to the national curriculum.

English schools now are required to teach basic lessons on reproduction as part of the science curriculum. Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales have separate education departments and standards.

Only Scotland makes sex education voluntary.

The government hasn't detailed what the new curriculum will look like, but schools will be asked to provide lessons on relationships and contraception, topics not previously required. Lessons will become more sophisticated as kids get older.

Elementary schools can offer lessons in naming body parts, preparing for puberty and relationship feelings, Knight said. For the very young, sex ed will mainly be about self-awareness, he said.

"We are not talking about 5-year-old kids being taught sex," he said. "What we're talking about for ... [children ages 5-7 is] knowing about themselves, their differences, their friendships and how to manage their feelings." NANCY ZUCKERBROD (AP)

EU Human Rights Prize Angers China

BEIJING | China's government reacted angrily Thursday to the European Parliament's decision to give its top human rights prize to jailed Chinese dissident Hu Jia, with Beijing calling him a criminal and the award interference.

The harsh reaction to Hu's winning the Sakharov Prize contrasted with the friendly face Beijing was trying to project as it welcomed European Union and Asian leaders for talks on the global economic crisis.

Adding to Beijing's fury, the European Parliament bucked Chinese pressure against giving the award to Hu, an outspoken advocate on human rights. Hu is in a Beijing jail serving a 3½-year jail term for sedition. The charge stems from police accusations that he had planned to work with foreigners to disturb the August Olympics. (AP)

Strike Kills 9 at School in Pakistan

Suspected U.S. missiles target Taliban-linked site on Afghan border

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN | Suspected U.S. missiles struck a religious school linked to the Taliban on Thursday, killing nine people in the lawless border region where al-Qaeda and its Taliban allies are believed to plot attacks on American and NATO forces in Afghanistan.

The strike came hours after Parliament warned against any incursions on Pakistani soil and condemned the wave of terrorism tearing at the country, while stressing the need for dialogue.

The suspected U.S. missiles hit the religious school on the outskirts of Miran Shah, the main town in the region of North Waziristan, four intelligence officials said. No students were believed to be at the school at the time.

Relying on informants and agents in the area, two officials said nine people were killed, including four pulled lifeless from the rubble hours after the strike. Two others were wounded, officials said.

The religious school belonged to a local cleric linked to the veteran Taliban commander Jalaluddin Haqqani, considered a top foe of the United States, they said.

The intelligence officials gave the information on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to speak to the media.

Militants in the northwest are blamed for rising attacks on U.S. and NATO forces in Afghanistan, as well as for surging suicide attacks within Pakistan. MUNIR AHMAD (AP)

France Captures 9 Somali Pirates

NAIROBI, KENYA | Tensions heated up on the high seas, as the French Navy captured nine Somali pirates near the Gulf of Aden.

The French Navy intercepted the pirates in two small boats about 115 miles from the nearest coast, finding assault rifles, grenade-launchers, grappling hooks and ladders onboard. The nine were handed over Thursday to Somali officials. French officials received assurances the prisoners would be treated according to international conventions.

Somali pirate Sugule Ali, a spokesman for those holding a hijacked Ukrainian arms ship, vowed Thursday to fight back if attacked. "Either we get the money or hold on to the ship. And if attacked, we will fight back to the bitter end," Ali told the Associated Press via satellite telephone. (AP)

Ambulance Fees Blocked

Montgomery council shelves plan to charge insurance companies

The Montgomery County Council Thursday morning blocked County Executive Isiah Leggett's (D) proposed ambulance fee legislation after an outpouring of opposition from residents and the county's volunteer firefighter organization.

The Public Safety Committee voted unanimously to postpone action on the measure, which was intended to raise about $14 million a year to fund fire and emergency services.

Leggett had stressed that his

PROPOSAL SPECIFICS

→ The fee, which would range from $300 to $800, depending on service, plus $7.50 per mile traveled, could raise an estimated $13.8 million in its first full year.

→ Under the legislation, county residents would not be billed, regardless of whether they have health insurance, and they would not be responsible for a co-pay or deductible. Non-residents could be billed a co-pay.

plan was designed to charge health insurance companies — not residents — for ambulance transport. Montgomery's neighboring jurisdictions, including the District and Fairfax and Prince George's counties, already charge for ambulance service.

But Leggett's proposal encountered resistance from Montgomery's well-organized volunteer firefighters, who waged an aggressive campaign with yard signs and phone-banking. Leaders of the volunteer organization, who say that charging for service is at odds with their mission, declared victory Thursday.

"The council is listening, not only to the volunteers, but to the citizens," said Marcine Goodloe, president of the Montgomery County Volunteer Fire & Rescue Association.

Santa, Tysons Mall Nearing a Deal

Dismissal of popular holiday entertainer sparked public outcry

Tysons Corner Center and the long-time mall Santa whose dumping triggered a local uproar might work things out in time for the Christmas shopping season after all.

Less than 90 minutes before a scheduled news conference, Santa's publicist e-mailed reporters saying "Tysons Corner Center management and Pam Deese, attorney for Mike Graham (aka the Tysons Corner Center Santa), have reached an 'agreement in principle' that will allow Graham to retain his position ... for the 2008 holiday season."

Mike Graham, left, the man known as the Tysons Corner Center Santa, has reached a deal with the shopping center after being fired following 18 years of holiday work.

County, spent 18 shopping seasons at Tysons before getting a pink slip this year. His admirers say he had a special touch with children, and frazzled parents, that helped turn him into a minor celebrity.

Hundreds of people whose families went to see Graham every year called the mall to protest his ouster, burning up e-mail group lists with commentary and threatening to boycott the shopping center.

"That's a devastating move they've done over at Tysons Corner Center," said Pat Chambers, whose daughter surrendered her pacifier to Santa when the time arrived to give it up.

"We bring him cookies every year. There's no way I can go back there if it's another Santa."

Vandals Target Montgomery Co. Speed Cameras

POTOMAC, MD. | Some motorists are spray-painting graffiti on Montgomery County roads to express their frustration with cameras that catch speeding drivers.

Police said someone recently painted the word "SCAM" in large letters in front of a River Road speed camera in an obvious protest against the cameras.

And in at least two other instances, the words "GREEDY SCAM" and "GOV. SCAM" have been scrawled in large letters on other roads near the cameras.

The county has used speed cameras since May 2007. If a motorist is traveling more than 10 miles per hour above the speed limit, a picture of their license plate is taken and a $40 fine is sent in the mail. (AP)

"AUCTUS MENTIS SPIRITUSQUE," THE MOTTO OF ST. ANDREW'S EPISCOPAL SCHOOL, MEANS GROWTH IN MIND AND SPIRIT. That is to say, an education at St. Andrew's is about academic excellence, but it's also about life. We challenge our students to reach their highest academic potential. But we also believe it is our mission to develop their creativity, to build their character, and to instill values that will make them good citizens in a complex 21st century world. That's why we require all of our students to participate in community service programs and initiatives. That's why we expose them to the arts—whether it's painting, theatre, or playing an instrument. That's why we believe that each faculty member should be a coach, an advisor, a mentor—as well as a teacher.

BUT THE ACTIVE WORD IN THE ST. ANDREW'S MOTTO IS GROWTH. It is a process that should begin early and continue throughout life. At St. Andrew's we believe that growth—in both mind and spirit—is best achieved through a continuity of learning and experience. As a school that offers grades from preschool through high school, we put an emphasis on continuity of education. Our curriculum is designed to build sequentially from year to year. There is a natural progression in our students' development, both as learners and as people.

In the lower grades we provide a nurturing environment that builds confidence and encourages children to take risks. In the middle and upper grades, we stress independent thinking, with students contributing in a cooperative environment. We also encourage a diversity of experience to develop each child's full potential. At St. Andrew's there are soccer players in the chorus and artists on the lacrosse team. By graduation, students have not only acquired an excellent college preparatory education but also have learned values and skills that will be with them for life.

Foreclosures Up 71 Percent

Influx of bank-owned properties is driving down real estate prices

WASHINGTON | The number of homeowners ensnared in the foreclosure crisis grew by more than 70 percent in the third quarter of this year compared with the same period in 2007, according to data released Thursday.

Nationwide, nearly 766,000 homes received at least one foreclosure-related notice from July through September, up 71 percent from a year earlier, said foreclosure listing service RealtyTrac Inc.

By the end of the year, RealtyTrac expects more than a million bank-owned properties to have piled up on the market, representing around a third of all properties for sale in the U.S.

That's bad news for anyone who lives nearby and wants to sell their home. While foreclosure sales are booming in many areas, those properties are commanding deep discounts and pulling down neighboring property values. "It has a pretty significant impact in terms of pricing," said Rick Sharga, RealtyTrac's vice president for marketing.

RealtyTrac monitors default notices, auction sale notices and bank repossessions. More than 250,000 properties were repossessed by lenders nationwide in the third quarter, 81,000 of which were taken back last month.

Six states — California, Florida, Arizona, Ohio, Michigan and Nevada — accounted for more than 60 percent of all foreclosure activity in the quarter, with California alone making up more than a quarter of all U.S. foreclosure filings.

Goldman Sachs to Cut 3,260 Jobs

NEW YORK | Goldman Sachs Group Inc. is cutting about 10 percent of its work force amid the ongoing downturn in the credit and lending markets, a person briefed on the plan said Thursday.

Goldman Sachs will cut about 3,260 jobs. Goldman's work force, which was at record high levels at the end of the third quarter, will be pared back close to 2006 and 2007 levels. No additional cuts are planned, the person said. This person requested anonymity because the company hadn't publicly disclosed details of the plan.

The job cuts are a direct result of significantly lower levels of business activity, the source told the Associated Press. (AP)

SILICON SUCCESS: Hooman Radfar launched his Web start-up, Clearspring, just after the Internet bubble burst on Wall Street.

The Starter Life

Want to start your own business? The time is always right

IN SUNDAY SOURCE | The economy is disintegrating. Credit is tightening. Banks are collapsing.

And you can't stop thinking about your sure-fire idea to market illuminated golf balls.

Starting a business can be a dicey proposition even in the best of economic times, and this seems like the worst of times. Let's get the grim statistics out of the way first: More than half of small businesses listed financial uncertainty as one of the three most significant challenges to their growth and survival, according to a recent survey by the National Small Business Association, a trade group.

Nearly 80 percent expect the economy to be flat or in a recession in the coming year. Almost 70 percent are in a hiring freeze, and 38 percent say their profits have gone splat over the past year.

"Even though times are tough, times are always tough when you're a small-business owner," says Molly Brogan, a spokeswoman for the association. "They muddle through."

Still interested?

Of course you are. That's because one key characteristic that entrepreneurs share is optimism: sometimes blind, delusional, fantasy-world optimism. But optimism, nonetheless.

Perhaps that is why in the same survey in which small-business owners bemoan their fate, more than half say they expect sales to grow and 43 percent predict profits will rebound.

So while today might not seem like the right time for illuminated golf balls, the first lesson of Business 101 is that there is never really a right time. We picked go inside the brains of five four entrepreneurs to gain insight on how to transforming that business plan you always bring up after a few beers at the bar into a truly million-dollar idea.

Here is one of the five:

Hooman Radfar launched his tech start-up just after the Internet bubble had burst. Talk about bad timing.

The 28-year-old from Arlington met fellow student Austin Fath at grad school. The two became buddies and, without ever having held down full-time jobs in the real world, decided to start their own company.

"You have to be passionate to the point of blindness to certain realities," Radfar says.

In the first year, raising money seemed to be the easy part. They received $38,000 in grants, starting with $5,000 from Carnegie Mellon to study widgets, self-contained applications designed to run in on a Web browser. Radfar says he was also fascinated by networks and the "social graphs" that were the precursor to Facebook and MySpace — arcane stuff at the time.

When Radfar went to Silicon Valley for the first time in 2005 to meet with potential investors, he got destroyed. But he says that's what he wanted to hear. He had to see the flaws in his business before he could fix them.

"Embrace them just tearing you apart," Radfar says. "You're wrong 50 percent of the time."

The trip to the Valley also exposed him to the industry's latest buzzword: Web 2.0. That helped Radfar hone his plans for the company that is now Clearspring, which develops online widgets and disperses them through the Web's social networks. Radfar is chief executive and Fath leads new technology and integration.

Now in its fourth year, the company recently won $18 million from venture capitalists and employs 75 people. AOL co-founder Steve Case and Washington Capitals owner Ted Leonsis sit on the his board of directors.

Launching his own company seemed like a risky proposition at the beginning, Radfar says. But he figured the worst-case scenario was that he would bomb out, move back in with his parents and listen to them say, "I told you so."

"Best case is that it's totally amazing," he says. YLAN Q. MUI (WASHINGTON POST)

A Healthy Perspective

Rogers returns from last year's injury as a smarter, better player

REDSKINS | It wasn't a stellar start.

Carlos Rogers didn't build an instant reputation like fellow Redskins first-round defensive backs LaRon Landry and the late Sean Taylor. He heard it from the fans, too, getting an earful about getting beaten — even during open practices.

And just when Washington fans were waiting for him to make a move toward the role of the team's top cover guy, Rogers tore his ACL seven games into last season.

Exactly one year later, Rogers is well on his way to being the cover corner Washington expected him to be when they took him 9th overall in the 2005 draft.

How'd he do it? He watched more TV. "I think it's a combination of being able to study, being healthy and just having a lot of confidence," Rogers said.

Whether it was his TV-timeout inducing hit on Cleveland's Joshua Cribbs last weekend or his 42-yard interception return in a Week 3 win over Arizona, Rogers has been an important part of the Redskins' 5-2 start.

After having surgery to repair his knee, the cornerback said he got to work on the six-month rehab process in Alabama with fellow former Auburn player Ronnie Brown — who is also enjoying a resurgence in Miami after a similar injury knocked him out last season.

The mending time gave Rogers the chance to reassess how he approached the game. While he Redskins cornerback Carlos Rogers tackles the Browns' Braylon Edwards. His play has reached new heights after knee surgery.

Lions receiver Calvin Johnson is averaging 21.2 yards per catch this season.

mentioned the hard work required to rebuild his leg strength, the corner credited his success this season to his new diligence in the film room.

"It's changed a lot. [You] don't just see a big hit or see a tough catch. Learn what [the player] did," Rogers said. "I understand the game more."

With veteran cornerback Shawn Springs sidelined for Sunday's game with a calf injury, Rogers should get plenty of time against Lions emerging star Calvin Johnson.

The second-year receiver is physical and averages 21.2 yards per catch. It's a match-up that would normally go to Springs, who at 33 appeared to be the Redskins' best corner entering the season. He now has some competition.

"I look forward to going at their top guy each and every week," Rogers said. ERIC BRANDNER

OPEN WIDE: The Redskins must be salivating over this week's stat sheet, hoping Detroit hasn't fixed some gaping holes in its defensive front:

→ Washington's new-look offense is third in the league in rushing (158.1 yards per game), and the Lions are the second-worst club in the NFL against the run, giving up 4.8 yards per carry and 167.5 yards a contest. Redskins tailback Clinton Portis is leading the league with 818 rushing yards. "You can implement the West Coast and it is working great, but we are still a running team," fullback Mike Sellers said. "I don't care what you want to do. If it is working, you can't get away from it." E.B.

Redskins' Shot to Run Up the Score

IF THE ABILITY to win close games is the measure of a good team, then the Redskins surely qualify.

With an average margin of victory of 4.6 points, Washington has scraped by to a 5-2 record. But, as they say, the end result is all that matters.

Yet there is something to be said for a blowout. Flexing your muscles as one of the NFL's elite every once in a while never hurt a top-notch squad.

This Sunday's game against the woeful Detroit Lions offers a perfect opportunity for the Redskins to pile up a huge victory.

If Washington doesn't hand the game to Detroit, it can't lose.

Name someone on the Lions not named Calvin Johnson. I dare you. Remember Jon Kitna is on injured reserve and Roy Williams is now in Dallas. Can't do it?

That's exactly my point.

The great thing about Jason Campbell is that he won't inadvertently sabotage the Redskins. The quarterback is on a historic streak — 332 passes at this point — without throwing an interception.

If Washington doesn't hand the game to Detroit, it can't lose. Of course, the same thing was said about the Rams two weeks ago.

So Jim Zorn, who called the Lions "the most dangerous" 0-6 team in the league this week, Campbell and Clinton Portis should aim to run up the score.

The Redskins are good team. Now, they need to prove that they can be a really great one.

REDSKINS | Misery Doesn't Love Company

The 0-6 Detroit Lions' home game against the Washington Redskins will not be seen in local Michigan TV markets because it was not sold out 72 hours before game time. About 5,000 tickets were remaining as of Thursday afternoon. The team says the game will not be televised in the Detroit, Lansing, Flint-Saginaw and Toledo, Ohio, markets under NFL blackout rules. The game would have had to have been sold out by 1 p.m. Thursday for the blackout to be lifted. (AP)

Weekend Sports

A bust so far with the Redskins, Jason Taylor hopes to get on track on Sunday against rookie tackle Gosder Cherlis and the Lions.

What to Watch For

Is this the week Jason Taylor finds his old form in Washington?

THE LIONS HAVE THE BALL RT Gosder Cherilus Vs. DE Jason Taylor

Jason Taylor was expected to make a big impact after coming to Washington from Miami. But so far, his presence has been muted by injury.

He missed two games after undergoing an emergency operation to treat compartmental syndrome. He returned to play against the Rams and Browns, but did not earn a tackle last Sunday and has said his injury is still not fully healed.

Detroit tackle Gosder Cherilus, a 2008 first-round draft pick out of Boston College, will look to exploit any weakness in Taylor. Cherilus lost his starting job last week, but is atop the depth chart for this week's game. The rookie's extra motivation to keep his job could be a problem for a Redskins team hoping to stuff the Lions.

Yet even without a 100-percent healthy Taylor, the Redskins are the seventh in the league against the run, while the Lions are 30th in rushing yards. KATE YANCHULIS

Cory Redding anchors a defense that is among the NFL's worst against the run.

THE REDSKINS HAVE THE BALL DT Cory Redding Vs. C Casey Rabach

The Lions are even worse defending the run than they are running the ball themselves.

The second-to-last place team in the league against the run will have to rely heavily on tackle Cory Redding to break through Washington's strong offensive line, which has produced the NFL's third-ranked rushing offense and the league-leader in rushing yards. Redding, a six-year veteran on the Lions' line with 16 tackles so far this year, will try to pressure Redskins center Casey Rabach to stop the run and get to quarterback Jason Campbell.

Though Rabach had a bad snap against the Rams that resulted in a turnover, the 288-pounder held his own last week against the Browns' 350-pound Shaun Rogers last week, which should give him confidence in the considerably more equal matchup with the 295-pound Redding. K.Y.

X Factors

→ Lions RB Rudi Johnson

Johnson, who had three consecutive 1,000-yard seasons in Cincinnati, has struggled so far this year. He has run for only 168 yards on 46 carries and no rushing touchdowns, and has been used sparingly — rookie Kevin Smith starts. But while Johnson may not be able to handle a full workload, he still has the potential to be an explosive back. The only question is if the Lions' coaching staff will use him.

Chris Cooley has only one TD this year.

→ Redskins TE Chris Cooley

Tight end Chris Cooley has 377 yards so far this year. Of those, 109 yards and his only touchdown came three weeks ago against Philadelphia. "Captain Chaos," as Cooley has dubbed himself, should look to have a similar performance this week against the 0-6 Lions. But even when he doesn't have an explosive performance himself, Cooley's willingness to block for his offensive teammates when he doesn't have the ball makes him invaluable in every game. K.Y.

Tough Road for Penn State

Nittany Lions look for first win in Columbus as member of Big 10

COLLEGE PICKS | There will be plenty of new Ohio State fans all over the country when the Buckeyes face Penn State on Saturday. The Nittany Lions are third in the nation in the rankings and BCS standings, behind No. 1 Texas and No. 2 Alabama.

Penn State, however, has a far more manageable slate after it visits Columbus, Ohio, where the Nittany Lions have never won as a Big Ten team. The picks:

→ NO. 7 OKLAHOMA ST. (PLUS 12.5) at NO. 1 TEXAS. Longhorns coach Mack Brown is 10-0 against Cowboys ... TEXAS, 42-31.

→ NO. 2 ALABAMA (MINUS 6.5) at TENNES-

Penn State quarterback Daryll Clark and the No. 3-ranked Nittany Lions (8-0) are favored to win Saturday night for the first time at Ohio State since joining the Big 10.

Fokou Is a Keeper

Maryland linebacker becomes a star after a 'successful journey'

TERPS | Moise Fokou was born in Cameroon, hardly a hotbed of football talent, and began his college career at Frostburg State.

From those roots, Fokou grew into one of the best linebackers in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The 6-foot-2, 225-pound senior leads Maryland in sacks, ranks third in tackles and is a special teams force.

"He has had a phenomenal year for us," said coach Ralph Friedgen, whose Terrapins can become bowl-eligible with a victory over North Carolina State on Saturday.

Fokou came to the United States at age 5. He was not heavily recruited from The Bullis School in Potomac, so he played one season at Frostburg (Md.) State before coming to College Park, where he took out a loan to pay for tuition before gaining a place on the scout team as a walk-on.

"We didn't recruit him; he wasn't even on our radar screen," Friedgen said. "Then I'm seeing this guy on the scout team run people down all over the place."

Maryland defender Moise Fokou sacks Clemson quarterback Cullen Harper. Born in Cameroon, Fokou — who played at Bullis — took an unusual path to College Park.

Fokou was handed a scholarship and a spot on the team.

Now, Fokou is part of a defense that handed Wake Forest its first shutout since 1998 last week. He has 41 tackles and with four sacks has already doubled last year's total.

"I'm surprised and happy. It's been a successful journey," he said. "I'm glad of the progress I've made since I've been here. It's a good story, I guess, coming from Division III to making an impact and starting here. I'm glad things worked out."

Hometown Hero's Return

From fanatic to crafty lefty, Moyer gets first start in World Series

WORLD SERIES | Jamie Moyer remembers the delirious Phillies fans swaying from light poles, climbing trees, sitting on shoulders, doing anything they could to catch a glimpse of that 1980 World Series parade.

Moyer was just a teen who played hooky from school in nearby Souderton and waited inside now-defunct JFK Stadium for the victory parade to end. Mike Schmidt and Larry Bowa spoke at the rally, all while the crazed fans chanted "We're No. 1!" and celebrated Philadelphia's first World Series championship in team history.

This year, Moyer wants to ride one of those floats down Broad Street instead of watching them go by.

Moyer and the Phillies were, as of Thursday morning, three wins away from championship No. 2 in the team's 126-year history. If anyone can relate to Phillies fans' lengthy drought, it's the 45-year-old Moyer.

The two-time 20-game winner has never pitched in a World Series game, and the first one of his 22-year career will come for his hometown team. His parents, other family and friends from around the area will be in their seats Saturday at Citizens Bank Park to cheer him on. "It's really nice to have this experience and have it in Philadelphia," Moyer said.

Moyer is scheduled to start Game 3 of the World Series against Tampa Bay. He can only hope the outing goes better than his first two of the playoffs. Moyer, who was 16-7 with a 3.71 ERA during the regular season, is 0-2 with a 13.50 ERA.

"This is the only thing I can take out of it: The pitches I made, they hit. The better pitches I made, which weren't many, they hit. The poor pitches I made, they hit," Moyer said. "I picked the wrong time to do it, but my teammates picked me up."

The rousing welcome the Phillies received when they returned home after clinching the NLCS took Moyer back to those days when Schmidt, Bowa, Steve Carlton, Tug McGraw and Pete Rose were the talk of the city.

"There's a buzz in the air here now in Philadelphia and it's pretty cool," Moyer said. DAN GELSTON (AP)

Santino Quaranta and United are just hoping to have a chance to make the playoffs when facing the Columbus Crew on Sunday. There are many playoff scenarios.

Perplexing Playoff Picture for United

Team needs a victory and help from rivals to earn postseason bid

UNITED | By the time D.C. United takes the Columbus Crew Stadium field on Sunday afternoon the team will know whether its season is effectively over or whether the playoffs have started early.

A brutal 1-5-3 stretch starting in late August has left D.C. (11-14-4) on the verge of missing the MLS Cup tournament for the first time since 2002. But thanks to a valiant come-from-behind win last week and the league's generous policy awarding berths to eight of 14 clubs, United has a chance to continue its season with a win in Ohio and the cooperation of two long-time rivals.

"Of course you're going to watch the games ... We'll watch it and we'll know which teams we're rooting for, but in the end we still have to continue to do what we do," coach Tom Soehn said.

One of the two games that will affect D.C. occurred last night. If New York (10-10-9) lost in Chicago, then United is in with a win on Sunday. If the Red Bulls won or tied, then a Kansas City (10-10-9) defeat in New England also will hand D.C. the keys to its own destiny.

Ties will complicate matters. If both N.Y. and K.C. draw, United will have to win by four goals at Columbus to sneak in. A K.C. win and N.Y. draw also requires a four-goal victory by D.C., while a N.Y. win and K.C. draw forces United to win by "just" three.

Either way, there's a decent chance United will have something to play for on Sunday.

"All year we work hard, we come in here every day, and it comes down to 90 minutes," midfielder Santino Quaranta said. "That's all we can ask for." BRIAN STRAUS

Taylor has been vice president of business operations for the Minnesota Lynx the last two

Taylor replaces Linda Hargrove, who was fired last month after a season that ended with a nine-game losing streak. (AP)

WOMAN ON THE EDGE: Angelina Jolie plays a mother desperate to find her son after police return the wrong boy to her.

Hollow at Heart

'Changeling' lacks the moral complexity of other Eastwood films

FILM | Something more than a child goes missing in Clint Eastwood's "Changeling," his tale casting Angelina Jolie as a real-life single mom whose young son vanishes in 1928.

On the surface, "Changeling" has all the rich atmosphere and evocative detail of his recent Academy Awards offerings, "Mystic River," "Million Dollar Baby" and "Letters From Iwo Jima."

Yet it lacks the emotional depth and nuance of that string of films marking Eastwood's remarkable late-career resurgence. Instead, "Changeling" slips back toward the workmanlike storytelling of Eastwood's decade between "Unforgiv-en" and "Mystic River" — sturdily made movies that ranged from passably engaging to forgettable.

With his first foray into heavy-weight drama, TV writer J. Michael Straczynski (creator of "Babylon 5") crafts a meticulous screenplay centered on the case of Christine Collins, who became a victim of nightmarish persecution by corrupt Los Angeles police handling the case of her vanished boy.

As the story grows bigger and more horrific, Eastwood and Straczynski lose focus, their sharp portrait of a mother facing the worst possible loss swallowed by a scattered, one-note melodrama of a lone saint battling a den of demons.

Jolie's Christine is an angelic figure, a woman making a safe and comfortable life on her own for herself and 9-year-old son Walter.

One day, Christine returns home from her job supervising telephone operators to find Walter gone. Five agonizing months pass without a clue, and then police notify Christine that her son has been found.

Amid a media circus, police Capt. J.J. Jones (Jeffrey Donovan) presents a boy that Christine insists is not Walter. The unctuous Jones convinces her to take him home anyway to try him out and see if perhaps, given her emotional distress, her own memory had failed.

From there, "Changeling" broadens into horror stories running on separate but parallel tracks, city officials going so far as to lock Christine up in a savage nuthouse, while clues to Walter's fate turn up on the ranch of a serial killer who slaughtered children with an ax.

There's nothing wrong with old-fashioned storytelling where good and evil are clearly delineated, but next to the moral complexity of Eastwood's recent films, "Changeling" comes off as a great expenditure of cinematic prowess in service of simplistic drama.

Any ideas where around here I might find a Vesper martini? Along the same lines: Is there a mixed drink called "Quantum of Solace" that you know of? If not could someone please invent it?

A Vesper is 3 parts gin, 1 part vodka and a quarter-part Lillet. When it's made right, it's heaven in a glass. Places we've had it include the bar at Lounge 201 and Bar Pilar.

→ Bar Pilar, 1833 14th St. NW; 202-265-1751. (U St.-Cardozo).

→ Lounge 201, 201 Massachusetts Ave. NE; 202-544-5201.

TILT-A-WHIRL: Sate your pinball craving at various nightlife hotspots.

I have a major jonesing for pinball. I know that there are machines at Black Cat and Asylum. But really, are there no other dive-ish bars with pinball machines in the entirety of D.C.? Are we really that pretentious?

Those are where I usually spend my quarters (badly), along with Galaxy Hut's vintage tabletop model.

→ Black Cat, 1811 14th St. NW; 202-667-7960. (U St.-Cardozo)

What You Expect Is What You Get

'High School Musical' stays wholesome in its third incarnation

FILM | Someday, Troy and Gabriella will actually open their mouths when they kiss.

Someday, Sharpay won't have backup dancers magically appear out of nowhere.

But for now, everything remains safely wholesome and intact in "High School Musical 3: Senior Year," even as the series leaps from television to the big screen.

All those winsome East High Wildcats are back — Zac Efron, Vanessa Hudgens, Ashley Tisdale, Corbin Bleu, et al. — as are mad-genius director Kenny Ortega and writer Peter Barsocchini.

"Senior Year" follows young lovebirds Troy (Efron) and Gabriella (Hudgens) as they stress out over leaving each other after graduation. Troy is planning to attend the fictional University of Albuquerque.

Zac Efron and Vanessa Hudgens are teens sans issues or temptations.

Gabriella, with her impossible balance of beauty and brains, is headed to Stanford University.

Some of the dialogue is painfully corny: "You might be ready to leave East High," Troy says to Gabriella before they take the stage together one last time, "but East High isn't ready to say goodbye to you."

Apparently, the start of college doesn't mean we have to say goodbye to "High School Musical," either. A new class is introduced in part three. CHRISTY LEMIRE (AP)

OLD, BUT SO GOOD: Buck Hill is in his 80s, but as he'll prove Saturday, he's still got it.

Nightlife Agenda

WHAT DO YOU WANT TO DO TONIGHT? BY FRITZ HAHN, RHOME ANDERSON AND DAVID MALITZ

FRIDAY

Teenagers are rocking high-top fades and gold dookie ropes, but it's 2008 instead of 1988. Some of them have even managed to scrounge up boomboxes. When the '80s retro trend first crept in, Rhome found it a bit jarring to see mirror images of himself from 20 years ago, but now he's actually seen kids inquiring about Kool G. Rap, Big Daddy Kane and Brand Nubian. So if you happen to know some of these kids finding inspiration in the hip-hop that you grew up on, bring them to along to the BLACK CAT tonight. DJ Dredd's putting on his Close To The Edge party, a celebration of golden-age and old-school b-boy classics.

SATURDAY

Buck Hill is probably the greatest Washington jazzman you've never heard of. Hill began playing his tenor sax in U Street clubs back in the 1940s, moonlighting from his job as a postman. Though he played with Miles and Dizzy and the rest, Hill never sought the spotlight or long international tours, preferring to stay home with his wife and family, work his day job and gig around Washington at night, while recording with the wonderful Shirley Horn. It wasn't until the late '70s that Hill began to record under his own name, and since then, he's (finally) been recognized for his soulful tone and expressive playing. The Wailin' Mailman is in his 80s now, but his concerts are still worth the price of admission, whatever it may be. Hill plays two sets at TWINS JAZZ Saturday night — 9 and 11 — for $15 each.

Glow, which has been on fire since it moved to IBIZA last year, features Cedric Gervais, whose mix of electro and progressive house won him residencies at big-time Miami clubs like Nikki Beach and Space. Tickets are $20 in advance.

SUNDAY

Little Brother's star continues to rise. No longer an underground sensation, the duo is approaching veteran status and carving out a career free from the mainstream/indie dichotomy that's breaking down. They're still pumping out projects with their North Carolina-based Justus League fam, but you'll also find them trading bars with major stars like Lil' Wayne and Bun B. And both Phonte and Rapper Big Pooh have extended their reach with multiple solo and side projects. But like classic duos Outkast and EPMD, there's a certain chemistry that only exists when they're together. Catch Raleigh-Durham's finest at the BLACK CAT Sunday night.

Check out an extended version of "Nightlife Agenda" each Thursday at www.washingtonpost.com/cityguide

AN AMERICAN CAROL (PG-13, 83 minutes) This flamingly right-wing comedy is antic and energetic, all right, but it's so broad and toothless that it winds up just being lame. It roughly tracks the Dickens Christmas classic: A Twinkie-gorging documentary filmmaker obviously based on Michael Moore is visited by three famous ghosts who show him the error of his peace-loving, health-insurance-demanding, America-hating ways. (PAUL FARHI)

APPALOOSA (R, 114 minutes) It's unashamedly old-school, but an off-beat, literate sense of humor keeps the film from becoming too weighty or self-absorbed. The premise is familiar: Freelance lawmen Virgil Cole (Ed Harris) and Everett Hitch (Viggo Mortensen) go to the little town of Appaloosa in the New Mexico Territory in 1882 in search of work. Bad guy Randall Bragg (Jeremy Irons) has just murdered the sheriff and two of his deputies. The frightened townspeople want things set right. After swift negotiations over the scope of their duties, Cole and Hitch take the job and go after Bragg's gang. Enter the widow Mrs. French (Renée Zellweger), who attracts both men. (MM)

BEVERLY HILLS CHIHUAHUA (PG, 90 minutes) In a saner world, Disney's flat-footed attempt to cash in on the Taco Bell talking-dog craze that peaked 10 years ago would be easily dismissed as the pop-cultural detritus that it is. But — things are just this crazy — it's actually not that bad. Drew Barrymore voices the part of Chloe, the pampered title character who, while in the care of a feckless baby sitter (Piper Perabo), is taken to Mexico and promptly gets lost. OK, the concept for the movie is admittedly lame, but there's absolutely nothing wrong with watching a passel of adorable pooches wrinkle their brows and bark while human voices come out of their mouths. (AH)

BODY OF LIES (R, 128 minutes) With its urgent post-9/11 context and often brutal violence, it seems off-key to describe this film as a nifty political thriller, but that's what it is. Leonardo DiCaprio plays Roger Ferris, a crackerjack CIA operative stationed in the Middle East whose handler, Ed Hoffman (Russell Crowe), backs him up from Langley by way of a secure phone and all-knowing satellite camera. The team is searching for a powerful al-Qaeda leader who has been masterminding bombings in Europe; the search will take Ferris from Iraq to Jordan to Dubai and finally to Syria in an escalating cat-and-mouse game of deception and mushy moral middle ground. Ridley Scott's film clicks along at an engaging pace, legibly limning its multitude of characters and even throwing in a good bit of wry humor. DiCaprio, however, seems off his game. (AH)

BURN AFTER READING (R, 96 minutes) CIA analyst Osborne Cox (John Malkovich) is told that he is being demoted and transferred, in part because he has a drinking problem. Outraged, he quits and retreats to his posh Georgetown rowhouse to have a drink and tell his wife (Tilda Swinton), who is throwing a party for Sandy and Harry Pfarrer (Elizabeth Marvel and George Clooney). Harry is having an affair with Mrs. Cox. Osborne, a yacht-owning Princeton alum who's convinced he's the smartest guy in town, reacts to his career crisis by dictating his memoirs. These wind up at Hardbodies Gym and in the hands of dense personal trainer Chad Feldheimer (Brad Pitt) and his upbeat colleague Linda Litzke (Frances McDormand), who demand a little from Cox for the return of his classified material. Oh, the high-octane cast works hard. But there's nothing to suggest anybody off-camera tried that hard, which is fatal to a Coen brothers outing. (NT)

CITY OF EMBER (PG, 95 minutes) The seemingly doomed city of Ember was built to last 200 years, and it's year 241. It's run by a mayor (Bill Murray) who is corrupt and not very bright. Doon Harrow (Harry Treadaway), the only son of an eccentric inventor (Tim Robbins), and Lina Mayfleet (Saoirse Ronan) want to save the city. It's not an entirely convincing trip, but it is the sort of satisfying movie you wished they would make more often. (NT)

THE DARK KNIGHT (PG-13, 152 minutes)

Heath Ledger's performance is a subtle, nuanced piece of acting so powerful it banishes all memories of the handsome Aussie behind it. He's supple of body and expressive with only his eyes, and his voice has undulations of irony and mockery and psychopathology. But when the Joker is absent, the film loses most of its energy and becomes nothing but a pretty-boy face-off between Christian Bale (Batman) and Aaron Eckhart. (SH)

THE DUCHESS (PG-13, 110 minutes) Directed by Saul Dibb, the film shows that if Dibb knows nothing else, he knows what he has in star Keira Knightley. She's a beautiful, heroic and engaging Georgiana, the soon-to-be wife of the fairly abominable Duke of Devonshire (Ralph Fiennes), who wants nothing more than a son to carry on his name. Her naivete is painful, even more so in retrospect, after the Duke proves himself a brute. Under their marital roof, he seduces Georgiana's friend Bess (Hayley Atwell) with the promise of helping her regain custody of her children. Then he refuses to let Bess leave. Georgiana is forced into a shotgun menage a trois. Everyone loves Georgiana, or will, except maybe women who are pregnant, or have been: By the end of the film, she has given birth to four children, and she still looks like Keira Knightley. (JOHN ANDERSON)

EAGLE EYE (PG-13, 118 minutes) We used to have bad guys to play the menacing "them" in the paranoid conspiracy thriller. Nazis. Reds. Rogue CIA operatives. Pod people. Corporate goons. Now we have technology. The hapless target of this espionage is Jerry Shaw (Shia LaBeouf), the slacker twin brother of a talented military officer and the prodigal son of a well-to-do family. Shortly after his wunderkind brother dies in a car wreck, Jerry finds his bank account suddenly filled with $750,000. His cell phone rings, and a disembodied female voice tells him the FBI is going to kick in the door in a few seconds. In New York, divorced mom Rachel Holloman (Michelle Monaghan) gets the same call. Director D.J. Caruso works hard to twist the paranoid-conspiracy-thriller motif. He brings in Billy Bob Thornton and Rosario Dawson as investigators who rely on good old human smarts to figure out what the heck is going on in the cyber-chase. (NT)

THE EXPRESS (PG, 129 minutes) Have you heard of Ernie Davis? If you have, you'll love this classic sports biopic of the Syracuse running back who in 1961 became the first black man to win a Heisman Trophy. And if you haven't—well, you'll love it, too, if only because Davis' story is so worthy of attention and respect. Rob Brown portrays Davis with sympathy and restraint, but it's Dennis Quaid as Syracuse coach Ben Schwartzwalder, who provides the film with its most fascinating figure. Schwartzwalder became a reluctant pioneer for civil rights as his integrated team withstood epithets, bottles and death threats while playing in the Deep South. It's entertaining, deeply moving and genuinely important. (AH)

GHOST TOWN (PG-13, 103 minutes) British comic genius Ricky Gervais plays Bertram Pincus, a misanthropic dentist who develops the ability to see dead people. One of the first ghosts he encounters is Frank (Greg Kinnear), who, along with a squad of spirits, needs Pincus to finish some of his earthly business. The deal: Frank will call off the rest of the otherworldly supplicants if Pincus successfully stops Frank's widow, Gwen (Téa Leoni), from remarrying. Often resembling a "Sixth Sense" with humor, Pincus embarks on a journey of self-discovery. (AH)

HAPPY-GO-LUCKY (R, 118 minutes) The British actress Sally Hawkins delivers a nervy, utterly captivating tour de force performance in Mike Leigh's transporting new film. Hawkins plays Poppy, a London schoolteacher with an indomitable spirit and persistently cheerful outlook on life, even when the bowl of cherries winds up being full of pits. Here, Leigh follows Poppy from the flat she shares with her beloved roommate, Zoe (the remarkable Alexis Zegerman), and driving lessons with a cranky conspiracy theorist (a brilliant Eddie Marsan) to a chance encounter with a street tramp and a flamenco class with a fiery teacher (the scene-stealing Karina Fernandez). Viewers may find themselves holding their collective breath, waiting for the inevitable shoe to drop on Poppy's indefatigable optimism. No spoilers here, except to say that the film won't break your heart—it will make it soar. (AH)

IGOR (PG, 86 minutes) Attempting to do with horror stereotypes and clichés what "Shrek" did with fairy tales, the film has clever moments but doesn't come close to the polished animation, wit and originality of the big green guy. In the realm of Malaria, where it's always a dark and stormy night, everyone plays his or her role. Every mad scientist has his Igor, whose job description is limited to lisping, "Yes, Master." But one Igor (voiced by John Cusack) dreams of bettering his station by designing his own evil inventions. When his boss, Dr. Glickenstein (John Cleese), falls victim to an experiment gone awry, Igor sees his chance and sets out to create the ultimate monster. (MM)

don't generate sparks of their own. But saving the party is their flame-throwing cop next door, Abel Turner (Samuel L. Jackson). It's your standard-issue tale of an eccentric neighbor who gets weird, menacing, scary and then downright nasty. The twist here is that the ever-so-reasonable couple being picked on is a white husband and a black wife. Their tormentor is not a white racist, but an angry black man. (NT)

MAX PAYNE (PG-13, 100 minutes) This highly stylized adaptation of the popular video game is 70 percent dark, snowy atmospherics and 30 percent loud, violent action. Mark Wahlberg is the proverbial New York cop on the edge searching for the killers of his wife and baby. Sexy girls and lots of automatic weapons are involved in an occasionally coherent plot. Special effects range from interesting to pedestrian. The whole thing ends with a New York skyscraper exploding. (MM)

MIRACLE AT ST. ANNA (R, 155 minutes) This highly anticipated Spike Lee film follows four "Buffalo Soldiers" who find themselves in a remote Italian village surrounded by German troops. Overwrought, overproduced, overbusy and overlong, the film finally suffers from the worst filmmaking sin of all: the failure of trust, in the story and the audience. And no miracle can overcome that. (AH)

NICK AND NORAH'S INFINITE PLAYLIST (PG-13, 90 minutes) This infectious night-in-the-life romantic comedy stars Michael Cera and Kat Dennings as the title characters, high school students who share rarified tastes in music but wildly different temperaments. Nick, the only straight member of a queercore band, still harbors feelings for his pop tart of an ex-girlfriend; Norah, who crosses paths with Nick while they're both looking for a secret show on Manhattan's Lower East Side, can't hide her disdain. As the two make their way through the smiles of a New York night, they bicker, confide, criticize and ultimately

mately find true love. (AH)

NIGHTS IN RODANTHE (PG-13, 97 minutes)

The romance between a guilt-wracked surgeon (Richard Gere) and a dumped wife (Diane Lane), who fall into each other's arms during a storm, is utterly and completely unsupported by anything that happens in the film based on the novel by Nicholas Sparks. What really sells this three-hanky tear-jerker is Lane's steely and vulnerable performance. Like Tinker Bell, she almost made me believe in fairies. Almost. (MO)

QUARANTINE (R, 89 minutes) Jennifer Carpenter, playing the too-thin, too-young, too-flirty TV reporter whose "ride along" with firefighters turns into a zombie virus nightmare, gives a performance that harks back to the Golden Age of Jamie Lee Curtis. No, the script isn't anything special, and the novelty long ago wore off for this style of moviemaking. "Quarantine" is a remake of a Spanish horror thriller about a reporter and a cameraman who get more than they bargained for when they do a story on the night shift at a fire station. (ORLANDO SENTINEL)

utes) The bravura way director Jonathan Demme juggles the hurly-burly of an upscale wedding—made hurlier and burlier by the arrival, straight from rehab, of the title character's (Rosemarie DeWitt) high-maintenance sister Kym (Anne Hathaway, like you've never seen her)—harkens back to the darkness and emotional complexity of "The Silence of the Lambs," and the madcap energy of "Something Wild." There's a dark secret, too, but its lurking presence never feels cheap or forced. There's something very recognizable, very true about the way it has percolated up through the psyches of Rachel, a psychologist; her ringmaster father (former clown Bill Irwin); and her emotionally remote mother (Debra Winger) manifesting itself in personalities that feel fully fleshed, if damaged in different ways. Or, in the case of Kym, the way it explodes with the force of a still-active volcano. That's natural also, and all too human. (MO)

RELIGULOUS (R, 101 minutes) Several of Bill Maher's ideas about religion will make you laugh out loud in the television host's globe-trotting, full-frontal assault on the three major Western faiths. But one of the rules of satire is that you can't mock things you don't understand, and the film starts developing fault lines when it becomes clear that Maher's view of religious faith is based on a sophomoric reading of the Scriptures. "You're smart

GLEN WILSON/WARNER BROS.

Another Cop Out

EVERYTHING ABOUT the dirty-cop thriller "Pride and Glory" is formulaic and forgettable, even down to its generic title.

"Pride and Glory" could be an uplifting drama about a basketball team breaking racial barriers, or it could be about an elite squadron of World War II fighter pilots. You'd never know the difference and it wouldn't matter anyway. Instead, it's an overlong saga of good and bad New York police officers battling for control, one that plays out both in back alleys and quiet suburbs. Edward Norton and Colin Farrell star as brothers-in-law and brothers in blue. When a cop killer takes down four of their comrades, years of schemes and resentments come bubbling to the surface.

If director Gavin O'Connor's film sounds familiar, that's probably because it's a lot like "We Own the Night," which came out almost exactly a year ago. Joaquin Phoenix was the black-sheep brother, and Mark Wahlberg was a young police captain on the rise. That movie was just as much of a throwaway, despite its similar pretensions of Greek tragedy. CHRISTY LEMIRE (AP) her for sassing him while trying to register to vote. What a pair they make, traveling through the deep South at the height of black-white tension. Soon, Lily and Rosaleen hit Tiburon, the magical town Lily has chosen to escape to. Once there, they are taken in by August Boatwright (Queen Latifah), a kindly earth mother and honey magnate who lives with her sisters June (Alicia Keys) and May (Sophie Okonedo) in a Pepto-Bismol-colored house. Through it all, Fanning more than keeps up with the big girls. (M)

SEX DRIVE (R, 109 minutes) Ian is a sex-starved Midwestern high school senior so dweebish that the object of his affection ignores him in favor of his 14-year-old kid brother. Meanwhile, his buddy—chubby, bespectacled, confident beyond reason—gets over with the girls like mad. This is the world of the film named for the impetus that drives teenage boys bonkers and for the road trip Ian and pals undertake so that he can meet a blonde, buxom babe in Tennessee who promises to deliver him from the curse of virginity. He steals his older brother's gorgeous 1969 Pontiac GTO and off we go on your predictably raunchy teenage sexcapade. The movie is pulled along mostly by James Marsden's cheerfully over-the-top performance as Ian's homophobic older brother, but Josh Zuckerman does a nice job of keeping Ian likeable. (NT)

cafe owner. They're both single moms and matriarchs at this point, naturally, and each have their hands full with their now-adult children. Woodard imbues Alice with such heart, warmth and genuine affection that it is likely you will leave the theater remembering her smile, which is a lovely thing. (NT)

VICKY CRISTINA BARCELONA (PG-13, 96 minutes) Life is still meaningless, but this time we get the message from Spain's two best actors, Javier Bardem and Penélope Cruz, who play divorced painters who have driven each other to attempted homicide. Their relationship is reignited by Scarlett Johansson, who enters their lives as Cristina, an American spending her summer in Barcelona. (DAN ZACK)

W. (PG-13, 29 minutes) The through line of Oliver Stone's new biopic of President Bush is the recurring Oedipal struggle between the titular Bush "Junior" (played in a squinty-eyed, set-jawed impersonation by Josh Brolin) and his far more accomplished father, George H.W. Bush (James Cromwell). Stone brackets his subject's unlikely rise by his decision to invade Iraq: That decision comes to pass in a series of sinister and amusing meetings with his war cabinet and Vice President Cheney. Played by Richard Dreyfuss, Cheney emerges as a quietly diabolical eminence grise. It's a glib, facile portrayal of what is doubtlessly a far more complicated relationship. Overall, the film is a scattershot attempt at stylized portraiture that plays like a half-baked editorial cartoon. (AH)

4 Stranger Danger

One of Alfred Hitchcock's true classics, "Strangers on a Train" is about the terrible things that can happen when you reveal too much of yourself to strangers. It's thrilling, and it'll probably put you off Internet dating for a while. F.Z.

→ AFI Silver Theatre, 8633 Colesville Road, Silver Spring; Sat., 7 p.m., $10-$12; 301-495-6720. (Silver Spring)

Last Call, Folks

If you still haven't done your Oktoberfesting for the year, there is one last option —

3 mind you, it's a pricey one, but that's your punishment for waiting this long to celebrate. It's all going down at the Brickseller on Saturday, where you will have a guide in the form of German beer expert Horst Dornbusch, author of "Prost: The Story of German Beer." He will aid you in the sampling of the good stuff. K.E.

→ Brickseller, 1523 22nd St. NW; Sat., 1 p.m., $65-$82; 202-293-1885. (Dupont Circle)

Swedish Nightingale

If you read this with any regularity, you know how I feel about Scandinavia. There's just an ineffable awesomeness in the 5 music, art and alcohol that hail from Sweden, Finland and Norway (and sometimes Denmark, although that's a judgment call.) So it should be no surprise that I'm excited about Ane Brun, an Ani DiFranco-esque singer-songwriter who is from Norway but lives in Sweden and thus gets double Scandinavian-points. F.Z.

→ Iota, 2832 Wilson Blvd., Arlington; Fri., 9:30 p.m., $15; 703-522-8340. (Clarendon)

Pixie-lated

Mirah looks like just another indie pixie with a guitar. But then she starts to play. Her unorthodox combination of instruments and her gorgeous, ear-catching vocals make this music something rich and strange. She's always delightful, and she'll never bore you. She's at the Black Cat this weekend, with No Kids. F.Z.

→ Black Cat, 1811 14th St. NW; Sat., 9 p.m., $15; 202-667-7960. (U St.-Cardozo)

Not for the Faint of Ear

2 Don't go see Deerhoof if you're prone to headaches. This band jangles and clashes, always seeming slightly out of tune. The trio mixes Japanese pop, metal and a little bit of crazy to make a new sort of a sound, one that's never soothing, but can be mind-opening. F.Z.

→ 9:30 Club, 815 V St. NW; Sun., 7 p.m., $15; 202-265-0930. (U St.-Cardozo)

No Yak Meat — Just Deliciousness

THIS CITY IS FULL of people who know they should make the effort to go out and explore but who, at the end of the day, are just too tired. We all have those days, where you want to try a new restaurant, a new bar, a new neighborhood, but instead you fall asleep on your futon watching "The Daily Show" and browsing Craigslist's "Missed Connections."

Feel no shame — but you have to eat, too. That's where Himalayan Heritage (2305 18th St. NW; 202-483-9300) comes in. Any restaurant with a two-mile delivery radius has a built-in D.C. clientele.

But is it any good, you ask? Many people have never tried Nepalese food, and may be leery when the only images "Nepal" conjures up involve yak-herders. Be soothed: It's a lot like Indian food, which Himalayan Heritage also serves.

The biryanis (which I like to think of as "rice with extras") are tasty and spicy — not as meaty as you might hope, but filled with crunchy bits of fried onion that will make you happy to be eating out of a Styrofoam carton.

But the can't-miss dish is the dumplings, also called momo, plump steamed morsels accompanied by a spicy dipping sauce. Though one order looks like a mountain of food at first, it will disappear entirely too quickly. They're like Pringles, except they taste good.

You can go to the brick-and-mortar restaurant in Adams Morgan, of course. But tasty bliss is just a phone call and thirty minutes away.

Exercise

Working out together can be tricky but also rewarding for couples

He wants to take a romantic run together through the woods. She wants to go off alone and use her headphones to tune him out.

When it comes to exercising with a significant other, motivation and support can turn workouts into "we time" — or unwanted criticism and control can make you crave lots of "me time."

Couples who like exercising together say it's a great way to squeeze in more time together while keeping each other moving. Feeling closer by sharing something they enjoy, they may end their workout with sweaty kiss, or maybe even a sexy shower.

“My 60-minute workout is my time to be alone with my iPod and the streets where I run.”

ALLISON PELTZ, CLEVELAND RESIDENT

But at the other end of the lap pool are those who cringe at the thought of being in the gym at the same time as their partner, who want to do different physical activities, work at a different pace or just be alone.

And these exercise individualists really, really don't want to hear their mate's "helpful" suggestions on technique and form. A partner just cramps their style, perhaps more than a nagging leg cramp.

A workout partner can be great for motivation, but when your bed-mate becomes your gymmate, special care may be needed. For better or worse, exercising together brings the relationship into the workout, says Jenny Susser, a clinical sport psychologist at the Hospital for Special Surgery in New York.

"If you have a strong relationship and become workout partners, it could be really great," says Susser, who has done couples counseling. "If you have communication issues, becoming workout partners could give you another forum in which to struggle."

Susser says criticism or "instructional communication" at home can spill into the gym. A pre-workout chat on when to push the advice and when to back off can help, she says.

Still, whether it's the form she

IN SYNC: Kristi Hennessey and her fiancé, Brian Costello, do crunches together at their house in Los Angeles, Calif.

Stronger Relationships

uses to squat, the pace he chooses to run, or even the choice of which exercise to do in the first place, criticism and critique are common. Sometimes, hearing it from someone you love makes it that much harder to hear.

Brian Costello says he put a moratorium on joint exercise with his fiancée for a time because of her constant commentary. As he tells it, he's a novice while she's an advanced exerciser, sometimes working up a sweat twice a day, with plenty to teach him.

"The sit-up queen," as he jokingly calls her, knows about 40 versions of the classic crunch. When they work the abs at night in front of the television, she tells him, "lean back more. Less. Point your toes up. Down," says Costello, 32, of Playa Del Rey, Calif.

"I think she views them as helpful tips," he says. "It's more a critique. She means well, but it can make a workout mighty annoying. 'I don't need a coach,' I used to tell her."

But in the last few months, he's come around and learned to cope with the comments. He wants to be in shape for their wedding next year and likes that his fiancée, Kristi Hennessey, costs less than a personal trainer but still gives him a push.

Having a different workout style also keeps people who otherwise care for each other away from (or trying to get away from) one another.

Gloria Wong doesn't like talking to anyone when she runs on trails along Lake Michigan in Chicago. And that includes her boyfriend of almost four years, who wants to accompany her to keep her safe. The problem was, he wanted to have "semi-serious discussions about our relationship," said Wong, 31.

Time can also get in the way of happiness. Kate Miller says her workout takes 90 minutes, but her boyfriend's lasts 45.

"When he finishes his workout, he'll actually hover over me until I am done," said Miller, 23, of Denver.

For those who want to be alone and focus on themselves, another person is just a distraction.

"We already work and live together," said Allison Peltz, 25, of Cleveland, of her boyfriend. "I think that's enough quality time, don't you? My 60-minute workout is my time to be alone with my iPod and the streets where I run."

Slate XX Factor

Slate XX Factor bloggers MELINDA HENNEBERGER and NINA RASTOGI were online Thursday to discuss the GOP's budget for Sarah Palin's outfits, how much clothing $150,000 buys and what impact the story will have on the race.

Who cares how much money she used? While I can't imagine spending that much on clothing, I think that's part of the whole scene. Why even bother having these big hooplas of conventions or allow the candidates to fly around in jet planes? It's all a waste of money when you think about it.

I don't think the issue is so much that Sarah Palin spent $150K on clothes — I wouldn't be surprised if Hillary Clinton spent that much on clothes and accessories in a comparable amount of time. I think the issue is that spending that much money at such high-end stores really shows the gulf between Palin's "aw shucks, regular gal" persona — which is really being sold to the public — and the reality behind that persona.

As an ex-finance person who loves fancy suits, how on earth did she spend so much? She's not wearing the most expensive couture. Is something hidden in the $150,000? Very expensive handbags?

I'm not entirely sure how the $150,000 broke down. Slate sent me on a fake shopping spree yesterday, to see if I could rack up the same amount at Saks Fifth Avenue. I ended up having to buy some very, very expensive jewelry to hit the full amount.

Why aren't more Republicans upset at how their money is being used? I donated to the Obama campaign and if he had spent $150,000 on clothes, I'd be upset.

Well, I can't speak for all the Republicans out there, but I think many people see it as a justified amount of money to spend on preparing a politician to be under heavy national scrutiny for several months.

Did any of the $150,000 go towards new clothes for Palin's kids? Perhaps a new dress for Piper, or maternity-wear for Bristol? Or a new onesie for Trig? Apparently some of that clothing budget did go toward clothes for Todd, Trig, Willow, et al.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Remain open-minded, and be willing to help those who are battling a formidable enemy. Your involvement can make all the difference.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) The potential for both profit and pleasure is high, but you'll have to make an important decision during the morning hours that may change things.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) What seems to be a game at first is likely to prove quite serious when all is said and done. You don't want to get caught in a trap.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You and a teammate may be having some difficulties communicating at this time. See if you can't strike a compromise that will ease tensions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You're not interested in following the rules, but you mustn't make waves for others even as you behave in a rebellious fashion.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Concentrate on your own security and safety; spend time in and around the home working with family members and other loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't pass judgments too quickly; be willing to listen to what others have to say before you decide just what must be done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Nothing is likely to be offered to you gratis, but you'll be able to scrape together just enough to satisfy a particular desire.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone you know well really means business—and you mustn't make the mistake of thinking that this is just a passing fancy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may be going through a crisis of confidence, but this is not the day to let your own doubts keep you from tending to your primary duties.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're in no mood for physical labor, but perhaps you can get by with doing the planning without getting your hands dirty.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You've been neglecting your own creative energies recently, and it's time to get back on track and follow a course that can really pay off.

Atheists Should Hedge Bets

I SUGGEST THAT the organizers of the secular ad campaign in England ("London Atheists Sow Faith in Ads," Oct. 23) qualify their "probably no God" message with "you're probably not going to Hell." Religious tenants aside, folks should Google "pascal's wager" for an analysis of belief from a rational standpoint. Pascal states that one should wager in favor of belief, in that there is nothing to lose and much good to gain. Bet against, and you are wrong? Ultimately the problem is in semantics. Human-kind just doesn't have the ability to understand the reality of it all, and we are often stuck with a Sunday school vocabulary. A great many people think of God as Charlton Heston in the clouds, and Hell as a Vincent Price movie.

Fill in each column, row and 3x3 box with the digits 1 through 9 without repeating any. The twist in Samurai Sudoku is that the digits that appear in the overlapping boxes must work for both puzzles. A piece of advice to get you started: Don't focus on completing one grid at a time. Keep the whole puzzle in mind as you go, because filling in a number in one grid could give you clues to another.

■ As co-host of TLC's "What Not to Wear," Clinton Kelly reforms the wardrobes and restores the confidence of the great untucked. Earlier this year, he found time to pen a style manifesto. The result is "Freakin' Fabulous" ($24.95, Simon Spotlight), a spirited how-to addressing horrors beyond pleated jeans. Kelly opens up about how good grammar and table manners can also enhance a person's style. And then, there's gin.

Before we discuss your snappy new style guide, let's take a minute to say goodbye to Mr. Blackwell.

Mr. Blackwell was a pop-culture critic well before there were six weekly magazines critiquing celebrities. It was an honor to be on his Best-Dressed List; it was an honor to be on his Worst-Dressed. Cher was on every year and never lost any sleep over it. He wasn't mean-spirited. With his passing, I fear that spirit has gone forever.

Tell us about your writing process. Our homeboy Alan Greenspan copped to writing his book in the bathtub. Did you?

I wrote mine while filming "What Not to Wear" —all 45 episodes — between January and June. I'd sneak away to my house in Connecticut. It was hard but I did drink a lot.

In your book, you advise getting dressed up to go to the dentist. What should we wear to vote?

I think getting dressed up is a good idea. Voting's a privilege, and dressing up is symbolic of taking it seriously. Also, if you're single, voting involves standing in line in your neighborhood. Who knows what could happen?

Do you help your friends get dressed?

I would never tell my dearest friends what not to wear. Yes, friends have always said I've had a bionic eye — I can scan anyone's body and tell what'll look good on them. I'm also really good at pointing out plastic surgery. People assume "What Not to Wear" is how I live, but it's not the case. If you ask for my opinion, you're going to get it. That's my policy. People on the show have signed up for it.

The tone of "Freakin' Fabulous" is warm but super-saucy. Have you been playing Mr. Nice Guy to your co-host Stacy London's bad cop?

It was never a conscious decision. I have real empathy for our contributors. They've been ripped from their homes and families, and shipped off to New York City to be critiqued. On the page, I can allow myself to speak freely. I'm a shy person in real life, so what you're reading is my voice inside.

Explain the connection between good manners and fashion?

A lot of beautiful, stylish people are a less than "fab-u-lous." Style is the way you conduct yourself. It's about being modern and respecting traditions and people's feelings. If you go to a fancy restaurant and don't know how to use a knife and fork properly, it's not fabulous.

I hear you have a thing for gin. Is this true?

Yes. I'm sure there are many people who have seen me making an idiot of myself thanks to gin. I had my first gin and tonic at 15 when my friend Sandra and I dressed up in suits and went to a bar. We ordered them like we'd been doing it all our lives.

Many women dress like teenagers thinking it makes them look younger. What's the good news about getting older?

As you get older there's a certain entitlement. Women can wear bigger jewelry — it doesn't have to be real. Make a statement, hopefully one that says, "I'm present and refuse to be ignored." That confidence can be an armful of bangles, like the ones worn by the real estate agent in "Under the Tuscan Sun." I can't believe I just admitted I saw that movie.

"Let's keep America beautiful, and buy less crap. Let's put a tax on tacky."

I see that confidence in Michelle Obama when she pairs a black dress with a big Tom Binns necklace. What do you think?

Michelle Obama gets it. Looking modern and classic at the same time is a note many American women find difficult to hit. Cindy McCain looks classic, whereas Michelle looks classic and modern.

Where do you see yourself in 10 years?

I have no idea. My clothing line could take off, or I could retire and make mosaic tables. Whatever makes me happy.

Finally, anything you'd like to tell D.C.'s movers and shakers?

Let's keep American beautiful, and buy less crap. Let's put a tax on tacky. KATE GIBBS (EXPRESS)

2 Breath of Fresh Flair

CLARENDON IS HARDLY the first place you'd expect to find cutting-edge clothes, but Mauro Farinelli aims to make Rag & Bone as popular there as Barnes & Noble. The Denim Bar cofounder has just opened his new shop, Farinelli's (2839 Clarendon Blvd., Arlington; 703-647-9856), full of hip, upscale men's and women's finds like Fred Perry polo shirts ($86). This is only the start: More brands arrive every week, and a Reston outpost is in the works.

1 Forest Range

SUSTAINABLE WOODS and recycled paper make Night Owl Papergoods' notecards, spiral pads (shown, $20) and 2009 calendars earth-friendly. The forest-dwelling friends — songbirds, squirrels and their pals — letter-press printed on the colorful pieces mean they're also whimsical and attractive. You can unearth the whole line now at Dupont Circle's Tabletop (1608 20th St. NW; 202-387-7117), along with other eco stationery.

For Haute Handbags

IF COCO CHANEL were still around and designing duds, we're sure she'd want to ferry her business cards in one of the quilted leather cases by Lodis ($35, Sassanova, 1641 Wisconsin Ave. NW; 202-471-4400). Current-day fashionistas can plop one of the sharp little beauties — which also come in navy and white — into a satchel or pocket. Somewhere, Karl Lagerfeld is kicking himself for not thinking of this first — and charging more for it.

A Well-Chilled Glass

PEELED GRAPE "EYEBALLS" and spaghetti "brains" are so last century. Modern fright-meisters can make Halloween cocktails — or cups of blood (um, Hawaiian Punch) — go creepy cool with skull and bones ice cubes frozen in Worldwide Fred's Bone Chiller rubbertrays ($3.99, Surlatable.com). Serving said concoctions in a dusty old stein that screams Tolkien's Middle Earth could add to the mod, highballs-at-Castle-Dracula vibe.

Seeing a Pattern Here

HIGHLAND PLAIDS aren't just for punkers or British royals. The sprightly woolens go decidedly downtown on Steven Alan's hipster neckties ($62, Lost Boys, 1033 31st St. NW; 202-333-0093). They'd look wintry and wonderful with a slim-cut shirt or blazer. A clip would bring a dash of "Mad Men" style, but resist the urge to use one with a Scottish family crest — that's a wee bit much, laddie.

ANSWERS FROM THE SHOEBLOGGER

My husband has surprised me with tickets to see my favorite opera singer, Denyce Graves, in her signature role, Carmen. I have decided to wear my favorite "little black dress," a vintage wrap dress that was my grandmother's. Can you help me find the perfect shoes?? —MOLLY ■ Manolo says, Denyce Graves as Carmen? Ayyyy! Que suerte, what wonderful good luck!

Of the course, whenever one attends the opera, the temptation is strong to go beyond simply "getting dressed up" and move into the realm of costuming. The Manolo cannot tell you how many times he has seen buxom blonde women wearing pig-tails to see Wagner, or dark-haired women with consumptively pale makeup for "La Boheme."

However, it is Carmen that brings out the worst offenders, women who affect Spanish mantillas, and put tall combs in their hair and the single rose behind their ear.

Do not do this, unless you are prepared to go the full measure of costuming, by putting your husband into the matador's traje de luces, the so-called "suit of lights," with the be-sequined bolero jacket, pink tights and bullfighting slippers. If you are going to do something silly, do not make it the half measure. Look, here is the elegant slingback from Christian Lacroix ($277, Zappos.com), the shoe with its very own "Flower Song."

The Queen of Quick

Sandra Lee on her shortcuts for dessert and home décor

Nobody knows more ways to turn a box of cake mix into a fancy-pants dessert or a roll of Pillsbury biscuits into new-fangled bruschetta than Sandra Lee. The host of the Food Network's "Semi-Homemade Cooking" (weekdays, 4 p.m.) recently released a trio of no-shortcut-too-short books, including the timely "Semi-Homemade Money Saving Meals" ($20, Meredith). We chatted with her about her fave splurges, predisposition toward wonton wrappers and plans for world domination.

What is your favorite thing to make from scratch?

I don't know. I can't even answer that question. Maybe cornbread, but I don't even do that anymore. We're all shopping at the grocery store where everything is semi-homemade.

Is there any dish that's impossible to "Semi-Homemade-ify?"

Only the ones that no one is really serving at dinner, like foie gras.

What's the craziest thing you've ever made with a wonton wrapper?

Probably sweet sticks to go over ice cream. You just cut them up into little tiny strips, fry them and put sugar and cinnamon on them. Then crumble them up and put them on ice cream as a treat topper when you don't have anything else. You can really turn anything into something special if you're smart.

What ingredients should a budget-conscious chef always have in the pantry?

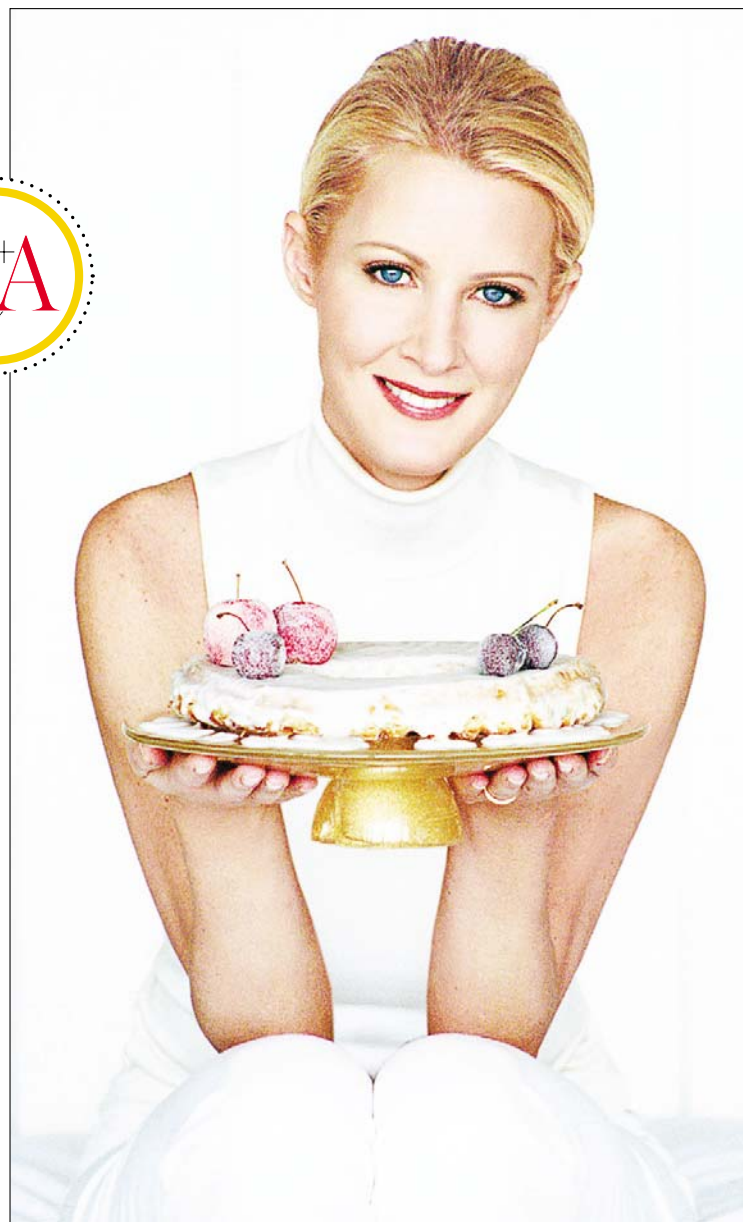

Things that are multi-purpose that you can use, whether it is a savory or sweet item. That's why they call me the queen of Bisquick! You can make a great pancake, a great biscuit or a great cobbler. I'm also a huge advocate of buying those packets of spices to add flavor to dishes.

What ingredients are worth the splurge?

I don't think you really have to splurge on anything. Maybe a good pâté that you can make a sauce with over a fantastic piece of New York strip?

Which grocery item do you wish was more widely available in supermarkets so you could use it on "Semi-Homemade?"

I wish organics were less expensive. Also things with less sodium and fat in them would be beautiful. There are a lot out there, but I'd love to see even more.

What do you say to people who accuse your meals of being unhealthy due to the amount of processed foods you use?

If you really want to go down that path, you're thinking about healthy as low in saturated fat. We all need some fat in our diet. We all need some sodium. If they think semi-homemade is not healthy, they haven't read and done all of their investigation. You have to be responsible for yourself while making things flavorful with what's available at the grocery store.

Where do you see your career going in the next few years? Any new domains you haven't yet conquered that you have your eye on?

In February we will be launching "Semi-Homemade Magazine." You will also see me probably starting a new show on the Food Network, and going back into home, garden and crafting. I can see myself getting a talk show, [but] it would be much more how-to instead of talk.

What's your home like?

I just bought a house in New York that I love. I plan on doing my little decorating — the semi-homemade way, of course. TAMAR HALLERMAN

Plan for All Seasons

Make your own spice blends to up the flavors in your cooking

Anyone who has ever cooked an Indian curry using garam masala or massaged one of Bobby Flay's pepper combos into a chicken before grilling it knows the culinary powers of a spice blend. But many people don't realize how easy (and tasty) it is to make these dress-up-that-recipe combos at home.

This means stepping away from the Lawry's Seasoned Salt. "I'm against store-bought blends," says Anne Bramley, a Cambridge foodie podcaster (Eatfeed.com) and author of Eat Feed Autumn Winter. ($35, Stewart, Tabori, & Chang). "Who's to tell me what goes on chicken? It seems so restrictive."

Whipping up your own barbecue rub or curry seasoning also makes sense in tough economic times. "You have a lot of these things in your cabinet already," says Bramley. "Why buy them a second time in some pre-made combination?"

This sort of flavor alchemy rules restaurant kitchens around the D.C. area. K.N. Vinod, chef at Indique Heights (2 Wisconsin Circle; 301 656-4822), adds a dash of this and a spoonful of that to mélanges like garam masala and tikka masala, which he then uses to ramp up a variety of dishes. At Equinox (818 Connecticut Ave. NW; 202-331-8118), chef Todd Grey puts his own spin on Old Bay and uses it in his barbecue rubs. The Source chef Scott Drewno mixes a Chinese 10 spice and an Indian-inspired amalgam for the restaurant's Kobe short ribs.

"You add more levels of flavor if you incorporate your own spice blends," says Drewno. "You can ensure they're fresh, and your food will be vibrant and flavorful."

The No. 1 rule to remember when creating your own blends? "Have fun experimenting," says Bramley. Mix together three or four spices you think might taste nice together (maybe lavender, sea salt and tarragon), then bake some sweet potato fries, douse them with your blend, and see if you've created something yummy ... or a taste bud-crushing monstrosity.

Do consider balance. "Think about heat and sweet," says Bramley. "Mix a large amount of hot cayenne with a small amount of sweet cinnamon and mild ancho pepper, and the cayenne may overwhelm the more subtle flavors. You'll just get heat. On the other hand, when you have some nice medium-heat spices like brown mustard seeds, a touch of cinnamon lends subtlety."

In many ways, this mucking around with ingredients amounts to a form of foodie travel — no tickets to Spain or China required. But don't think merely in terms of where a spice is grown; that might limit you to warm Asian climates. Instead, consider cultures that have adopted a specific spice. For example, the Brits use a lot of ginger and Scandinavians heart their cardamom. Earl Grey-ginger blend, anyone?

"It allows you to explore culinary history," says Bramley. "When you buy a North African spice mixture, that's a producer's idea of that culture. When you decide you want to make a Moroccan dish on your own, you head to the Web to do some research. It's richer that way."

When you're creating your own blends, buy whole spices and then, says Drewno, "Toast each separately in a dry sauté pan." That holds true only for actual spices — dried berries, bark, roots and seeds of bushes — not the leaves of plants (thyme, oregano, parsley), which are actually herbs. They'll scorch in a hot pan "Toast spices for about 30 seconds," he says. "You don't want to blacken them. You're releasing flavor and essence." Cool them. Then blend or grind them.

A blender or small coffee grinder dedicated just to spices works best here; don't pulverize coffee beans in the device, or you'll create a cumin-sea salt flavored dark roast or spices that smack of Mocha Madness.

Vinod uses other techniques as well. "If you toast the spice, it's one taste," he says. "If you soak it in water, that's different. If you soak it in hot oil, that's another. Experiment — you'll get different flavors out of each preparation." KELLY DINARDO

RECIPE FILE

Want to give DIY spice blends a try? We asked a few local chefs to share their favorite flavor combos.

1. Chutney Powder

From K.N. Vinod, Indique Heights

INGREDIENTS 2 oz. split Bengal gram dal; 2 oz. polished black gram dal; 2 oz. pigeon peas; 2 oz. long-grain rice; 5-6 whole dried red chilies; 1/2 oz. whole black peppercorns; 2 oz. sesame seeds (white or black)

TOAST ALL the ingredients in a skillet on medium heat for 1 to 2 minutes. Grind all ingredients together in a spice grinder or a coffee mill. Store in an airtight container and use as needed. This spice mix blends well with clarified butter or (olive oil) for use as an accompaniment for breakfast items such as dosa.

2. New Bay Spice

From Todd Grey, Equinox

INGREDIENTS 4 tbs. fine sea salt; 1/4 tsp. all spice; 2 tbs celery root powder/celery seed; 1 tbs paprika; 1 tsp mustard seeds; 2 bay leaves; 1/2 tsp fennel seeds; 1 tbs grated fresh ginger; 1/8 tsp white peppercorns; 1/8 tsp cinnamon; 1/4 tsp cayenne pepper; 1/2 tsp sumac; 2 tbs chili powder

COMBINE ALL ingredients in a spice grinder. Blend until powdered. Keeps in airtight container for up to three months.

3. Mustard Curry Powder

From Scott Drewno, The Source

INGREDIENTS 6 cloves; 8 cardamom pods (green); 2 tsp. black peppercorns; 1 tbs fenugreek; 1 tbs mustard seed; 2 tps cumin seeds; 2 tsp coriander seeds; 2 tsp ground turmeric; 2 tbs mustard seed (brown and yellow); 1 tbs cumin seed TOAST SPICES in a dry skillet. Cool. Grind in spice grinder. Pass through sieve.

4. Garam Masala

From K.N. Vinod, Indique Heights

INGREDIENTS 2 oz. cardamom (small / green); 1 oz. black cardamom; 2 oz. cumin seeds; 3 oz. coriander seeds, 1 oz. shahi jeera (black cumin seeds); 2 cinnamon sticks; 1 oz. cloves, 2 small bay leaves; 1 oz. whole pepper corns; 1/2 oz. nutmeg, 1 oz mace.

TOAST ingredients in a pan over low to medium heat) or in the oven. Powder them in a spice grinder or a coffee grinder.

Party Clothes

Be true to your guy with bling, bags and more

Dudes dressed like Uncle Sam, women sporting elephant ears, and lots of folks in red, white and blue stripes. Presidential party conventions aren't a good place to pick up fashion tips, are they? Still, during this historic mud sling-a-thon, er, race for the White House, many designers have dreamt up new and smart ways for you to wear your party—or candidate—loyalty on your sleeve, head or feet.

"It helps people feel like they can personally make a difference," says D.C. jewelry maker Maria Fyodorova, who has been creating abstract earrings using Barack Obama's last name.

Much of this style enthusiasm stems from having a younger, hipper wannabe prez (Obama) than we've seen in some time, as well as two super stylish would-be first ladies. "Obama's really attractive to youth, and that drives fashion," says Celene Gill, a D.C.-based etiquette coach. (It helps, too, that Madison Avenue names like Tory Burch, Vera Wang and Marc Jacobs did T-shirts for the Democrat's official shop at Store.barackobama.com.)

But John McCain is also showing up on a range of accessories, from NB's Closet's laser-cut wooden ring with the maverick's face on it ($6, Etsy.com) to D.C. jeweler Ann Hand's jeweled shades (shown).

No matter where your loyalties lie, there's a time and a place for trotting out partisan pieces. That means putting on your "Sarah!" T-shirt before a rally is fine; sporting your "Arugula Eaters for Obama" button at the office, not so much. "Most corporate environments do not allow you to wear political statements," says Gill.

You won't poll well with coworkers if you show up on Election Day in an Obama "Hope" hoodie, and in some polling places, it's even illegal. "You cannot wear any items that could sway a person to vote a certain way," says Dan Murray from the D.C. Board of Elections and Ethics. In Virginia and Maryland, the laws aren't as cut-and-dried, but you might leave that "Friends Don't Let Friends Vote for Alaskans" shirt for that private, election-night rally at your like-minded pal's place.

Still, the urge to show your red or blue pride amounts to a form of patriotism, even if doing so might inspire dirty looks from those who disagree with you. And come Nov. 4, you'll hopefully head into the booth with the same spirit. "I hope that everyone who buys a McCain or Obama shirt votes," says Gill. "These aren't just fashion statements." ASHLEY JOY PARKER

(1) The future's so red, you've got to wear John McCain rhinestone-crusted shades ($175, Ann Hand, 4885 MacArthur Blvd.; 202-333-2979). (2) Local designer Maria Fyodorova shapes sterling silver into retro earrings using the name of "that one" ($110, Maria@barefootczarina.com). (3) Think Arizona politicians are hot? Don an oxidized silver charm necklace ($42; Jenerijewelry.etsy.com) to show your loyalty to the maverick himself. (4) Barry is so very subtly endorsed via Maria Fyodorova's necklace ($70, Maria@barefootczarina.com). The Urge to Splurge

It's tough to go from buy, buy, buy to bye-bye, credit cards

Hi, I'm Betsy, and I'm a major shopaholic.

My addiction comes in purely fashion terms: I get weak at the thought of a gorgeous Prada print, a perfect Phillip Lim pleat or a crimson Louboutin sole. Even Target's big red bullseye makes my adrenaline skyrocket.

For years, shopping has been my favorite pastime. As a kid, it meant stockpiling flavored lip gloss; as an adult, it's become something more extensive — and expensive. My staggering shoe collection might inspire envy, but frankly, my bank account is nothing to be jealous of.

It's not just me — chats with friends lead to tales of "I-just-had-to-have-it" moments. My Tivo overfloweth with episodes of "Gossip Girl," where shopping binges are as much part of the day as dinner. While the upcoming chick flick "Confessions of a Shopaholic" won't be out until February, the trailer of actress Isla Fisher tackling another shopper over discounted Gucci has been airing for months. The message is clear: Rabid shopping isn't reckless, it's just good fun.

The reality? The average American household has nearly $9,900 in credit card debt. In handbag terms, that's one luxe croc-trim tote by Bottega Veneta, $6,800 at Neimans. But with the economy and my credit card bill both reaching a dire state, now seems like the time to amend my spendy ways.

And so, earlier this summer, I tucked my little plastic friend deep in a drawer. I was going cold Marc Jacobs — only essentials allowed.

My resolve lasted four days, the first three of which saw me telling everyone I knew about my no-shopping 12-step program. By day four, I was anxiously weighing buying a pair of patent platform heels. There was only one pair left, in my size, and at 50 percent off! I fished my pal out of the drawer and didn't feel guilty. Much.

In Alcoholics Anonymous, people seek sponsors to help them through tough times. I called psychologist April Benson, who runs the Web site Stoppingovershopping.com and wrote "To Buy or Not to Buy: Why We Overshop and How to Stop" ($17, Shambhala), out in December.

"Overshopping is a smiled-upon addiction, but the reality is that many people struggle with it," says Benson. For bag-obsessed me, she plumbed the depths of my fashion fanaticism: How did I feel when I shopped? (Elated, then guilty.) Did I actually want to stop? (Not really.) What would happen if I didn't? (Added stress. Less security. My closet imploding from the excessive weight.)

Benson sent me an advance copy of her book, which I devoured with the fervor I'd once devoted to hunting for designer finds at Filene's Basement. It didn't take long to understand that overspending is much more serious than a chick-lit heroine would have you believe, sometimes stemming back to childhood experiences with money. Newly resolved to break this cycle, I put the credit card away for good.

"Shopping is a smiled-upon addiction that many struggle with."

That's not to say that my recovery hasn't sometimes been as shaky as 6-inch heels. I've had relapses (Sigerson Morrison shoe-booties) and plenty of frustration. But mostly, I feel relief. In three months, my debt has dropped. My savings have risen. My closet is no longer on the verge of collapse. Er, pretty much.

Instead of buying on a whim, I limit my spending to what I actually need (a new work bag) and what I don't (a twelfth pair of jeans). Before any big purchase, I have to wait at least 24 hours before I fork over the funds. Often, I find I don't want it as much as I first thought I did.

I call Benson to report on my progress. The biggest surprise? Now that I'm not hitting the boutiques a few times a week, I'm kind of bored! She suggests I jump ahead in her book to the chapter on values. "You can't give up something immediately gratifying like shopping without replacing it with something else," she says. "There's fulfillment that's healthy and enhances your life, and there's fulfillment that doesn't."

Sorry, Manolo — I guess we're no longer going steady. Though if I spot you on sale, that might be another story. BETSY LOWTHER (EXPRESS)

How to Dig Up a Deal

Even when money's tight, your place can look all right

I'm looking for a cheap futon (the mattress, not the frame). With C-Mart closing, where are the bargain basement hunters going these days for hit or miss bargains?

Leesburg Premium Outlets has a number of home store outlets in it, including Crate & Barrel and Pottery Barn, and there is a Restoration Hardware outlet there as well.

Decorative pillows. Where can I find ones that are not terribly expensive? I'd like to spruce up the living room and bedroom with the addition of some decorative pillows, but I'm not sure how many to use, how to "match" them and again, where to find them at a reasonable cost.

For nice, inexpensive throw pillows, I would check out Target (the Victoria Hagan and Dwell pillows are particularly nice), Pier 1, West Elm, Anthropologie (they are pricey, but their sales are terrific).

My husband and I recently saw the most well-decorated house in Arlington. I must know where I can find great vintage lamps, dressers, desks, mirrors and fireplace mantles dating to the 1930s and 1940s. One of the smartest things we saw was an old fireplace used as a headboard. It was extraordinary! Where are your favorite places to find great pieces like these?

Yard sales. Estate sales. Weschler's Tuesday auctions. Miss Pixie's and Ruff & Ready on U St. NW. Georgetown Flea Market. Goodwill and Salvation Army. You are right — furniture from the 30s and 40s is well made and often cheaper than new.

We have a tight galley kitchen, and we want to add cabinets to one wall that has empty space. However, renovating the whole kitchen is not in our budget right now. Is there a reasonably priced line of cabinets and counters that would not only look good but also likely be available in the years to come when we are ready to replace the other cabinets? Or can you suggest a good place to buy second-hand cabinets that we could paint over?

Ikea has great deals on very well designed cabinetry and kitchen essentials. For secondhand, Habitat for Humanity in Alexandria, and Community Forklift in Edmonston, Md., are two possibilities.

Do ready-made slipcovers EVER look decent? Tailored, trim, not too droopy or sloppy? Do Pottery Barn slipcovers work effectively on non-PB sofas? I can't afford to reupholster my sofa and loveseat now, but I don't want to spend money on a product that just won't work.

I would not suggest buying slipcovers from PB if you don't have a PB sofa. You won't be happy. We would say save your money to either have custom slipcovers made or to reupholster. Off-the-rack stuff is pretty casual and won't fit perfectly.

I'm looking to get a decent sleeper sofa for $2,000 or less. So far I'm looking into JCPenney, Crate & Barrel and Pottery Barn (and obviously Craigslist). Do you have any ideas of where else I could look?

Craigslist is obviously a good place to start. But in these economic times, sales are going to be abundant in the furniture stores. Go to the Mitchell Gold+Bob Williams store at 1526 14th St. NW and check the sofas out yourself. They have late shopping hours most nights. The funny thing is, many sofas at Pottery Barn and Crate & Barrel are made by the Mitchell Gold+Bob Williams Co.

B.I.O.

* BY INVITATION ONLY: UPCOMING WEDDINGS & UNIONS

Michael Goodman, Morgan Hutchison

Morgan, 26, is an environmental consultant, and Mike, 25, is an economist. They live in Burke, Va.

■ The Main Event: The ceremony and reception on Nov. 1 will take place at Potomac Point Vineyard in Stafford, Va. The bride's brother will officiate the formal ceremony before 200 guests.

■ How They Met: Says Morgan: "We first met about six years ago when Mike was dating a friend of mine. We met again two-and-a-half years ago when we were all out to celebrate that same friend's engagement."

■ First Impressions: "I thought he was good looking and easy to talk to, and I talked a lot because I was nervous." "I thought she was beautiful, elegant and talkative, which was good because I didn't have to carry the conversation."

■ How He Proposed: "Mike took me back to the Union Street Pub, where we had our first date. Afterward, we went for a walk by the water and he got down on one knee. Mike held out a ring that I could barely see in the dark."

■ Their Song: "Cross My Heart" by George Strait. "Mike loves him and he made me watch the movie 'Pure Country' when we first started dating." "I'm a huge fan of George Strait and the lyrics ring true."

■ When He Knew: "Driving home to our apartment from work one day, I realized that I would be perfectly happy driving home to her every evening."

"Mike held out a ring that I could barely see in the dark."

Dateline: Palm Beach

When CYNTHIA KOPKOWSKI, 30, accepted a job as education reporter in West Palm Beach, Fla., she never expected to learn about love. Certainly not from her office neighbor, crime reporter SCOTT MCCABE, 40. "He was aloof," she recalls. But she'd misread him. McCabe was hanging back because he didn't want to overwhelm the pretty journalist. "I let the young guys in the room make a run at her," he recalls. Scott's patience paid off. Before long, Cynthia admits, she was finding ways to run in to him. "I would invent excuses to have to come to the office at night when he was working the cops desk." Their time together in Florida led to dates and love. And love led the couple to Washington, D.C., where now he writes for The Washington Examiner and she for the NEA. Scott proposed with a special front page topped with the headline, "Cynthia, will you marry me?" The bride-to-be recalls her utter surprise at the newspaper box on the corner of 18th St. and Columbia Roads — "It was crazy." They will be married in D.C. on Saturday, Oct. 25. KATE GIBBS (EXPRESS)

Norman Malcolm Jr., Shawnett Samuels

Shawnett, 29, is a medical assistant, and Norman, 29, is an HIMS clerk. They live in Laurel, Md.

■ The Main Event: Three pastors from their church will officiate a very formal ceremony. The couple has invited 230 guests to celebrate with them on Nov. 1.

■ How They Met: They met at church. Says Shawnett: "I was 11 years old and he was 13. Norman walked up and said, 'Hi. I'm Junior.'"

■ How He Proposed: "It is a custom for my church to sing 'Happy Birthday' to anyone celebrating," recalls Shawnett. "As my birthday was the day before, I walked up to the front. As I was about to take my seat with the choir, Junior started walking down the aisle with a bou-quet of flowers and balloons. He took the microphone, sang 'Happy Birthday' and got down on one knee."

■ Their Song: "From This Moment" by Shania Twain.

■ Stupidest Fight: Whether or not Shawnett eats peanut butter.

■ The Cake: Traditional Jamaican rum cake with royal icing.

■ With an Infinite Budget: An all-expenses-paid wedding on an exotic island.

■ Honeymoon: The Bahamas

Kelly Harris, Adam Hudes

Kelly, 27, is a paralegal, and Adam, 29, is an attorney. They will live in Washington, D.C.

■ The Main Event: An afternoon ceremony on Oct. 25 in the UVA Chapel, the bride's alma mater. A priest and a rabbi will officiate an otherwise traditional ceremony. Glenmore Country Club in Charlottesville will host the 200 guests for an elegant reception.

■ How They Met: At a happy hour in Georgetown sponsored by the law firm where they were both working

■ How He Proposed:

"I hijacked the date-night Kelly had planned. After dinner we walked toward the Navy Memorial and I stood her right in the center of the plaza. It was a really peaceful, clear night. No one was around, and that's when I asked Kelly to spend the rest of her life with me. I think it worked out well."

■ Their Song: "Kelly doesn't know this but for me it's 'I'll Be' by Edwin McCain. It was the song playing on the radio when I realized I wanted to marry her."

■ Stupidest Fight: Kelly remembers the one about "how much TV our future children would be allowed to watch."

■ When She Knew: "When I saw him fit in seamlessly with my parents and five siblings — not an easy task!"

■ Celebrating Heritage: The bridesmaids will wear wraps embroidered with colorful Hungarian designs, and sweet potato latkes will be served during the cocktail hour.

■ With an Infinite Budget: We would have invited 350 people, and paid someone to plan the whole thing.

■ Honeymoon: Hawaii and Australia.
